

City, County Workers Followed The Game On Television, Radio

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

There are those misguided souls who have been known to hold that Lincoln is a center of government and education, not to forget commerce.

Bushwa; Buddy. This is Go Big Red Football country. You only had to visit the County-City Building to be convinced of it.

'Twas the day after Christmas and all through the halls not a citizen was stirring. And in the empty offices the bureaucrats, for the most part, sat in front of "boob tubes" watching the Fiesta Bowl.

By actual count there were 12 black and white sets, 10 color sets and seven radios tuned into the game.

Taking top honors in the battle to have the biggest set were the clerk of the district court's office and city public works. Each had a 21-inch color set.

"Twenty-one inches. God, we've only got a 3-inch black and white," complained the receptionist in the city prosecutor's office.

The three-inch claim was only for emphasis. The smallest television set, a five-inch, was being watched by Phyllis Niebuhr, the lone employee left in the county attorney's office.

Goodies Supplied

But what the offices lacked in screen inches, they made up in goodies. There was pizza, party mix, candy, pop, cookies, beer nuts — but no beer — and popcorn, including a yard-tall package in one office.

A 3 p.m. nose count showed five patrons in the building and at least five times that number of employees watching the game.

There were, however, three holdouts who refused to turn on even a radio.

There were a color television set and two black and white sets in the police department.

In the city personnel office two secretaries huddled at a front desk. Back in director Walt Mitchell's office an all-male group of six or seven watched the game.

Not Only Men

Interest in the game was not exclusive to men. In City Clerk Marguerite Spaedt's office a miniature black-and-white perched on a swivel chair screwed up to its highest level.

The receptionist in the City-County Planning Department, glumly listening to the game on the radio, said television sets were not permitted there.

There was no television in the Department of Community Development. Director Randy Arno was down in the office of the city property manager, which was where people in data processing also stopped in to watch the Huskers.

In the Lincoln water system office there was only a radio. Why no television?

'Nobody Remembered'

"Nobody remembered to bring one. I thought everyone else was," said one worker.

And in the juvenile court judge's chambers about six employees sat in front of the bench. There was no judge, only the tube.

In one county office even the radio had been banned by the boss. But the boss left just before game time, and a contraband radio was hustled in.

Even the lone secretary in the county commissioner's office had a radio — her Christmas gift. No commissioner was in sight.

The mayor, attending to business as usual, said she planned to stop over to an adjoining office for a few minutes of color game time.

And so it went for government — and private industry alike. The Journal-Star building boasted at least four blaring television sets, a half dozen radios, and an alternating chorus of cheers and groans.

League To Seek Lebanese Truce

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

The Arab League will try for a lasting cease-fire in Lebanon's civil war, an informed Palestinian guerrilla source said Friday as fighting continued in the Lebanese capital.

The source said Mahmoud Riad, the league's Egyptian secretary general, is expected in Beirut soon. It is not known what form intervention by the 20-member league might take.

The initiative could be purely diplomatic or member state troops might be used as observers or peacekeepers. Riad tried unsuccessfully to mediate an end to the nine-month-old war during its early stages.

After a night of fierce fighting, Moslem and Christian private armies lobbed mortar shells into Beirut residential districts Friday. Police reported 12 persons killed and 35 wounded in the Christian stronghold of Ashrafiyeh and Moslem suburbs in western Beirut.

Gunmen also fought fierce battles near the fire-gutted Holiday Inn and several new fires were set in the downtown commercial district.

Officials in Amman, where Saudi Arabian King Khaled visited this week, said Friday that Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Jordan — all League members — also would work independently to end the fighting and put Lebanon back on its feet economically.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have real estate and business investments in Beirut and, like Jordan, are reported concerned at the increasing influence of revolutionary leftists on the Moslem side.

France reportedly has promised to guarantee a final settlement and push for Common Market investment to refloat the battered Lebanese economy. Arab oil states will also help in this effort once the fighting is definitely ended, the source said.

The source backed up a report Thursday in the daily newspaper An Nahar that the Moslem-Christian coalition cabinet has agreed on terms of a political solution.

The newspaper said the coalition cabinet of Moslem and Christian leaders has approved a proposed agreement with these major provisions:

Moslem demands for more political power will be satisfied by replacing the present 6-5 Christian majority in parliament with an even division.

Power to appoint the Moslem premier will be taken from the Christian president and given to parliament, and some power will be taken from the president and given to the premier.

Moslem demands for economic and social reforms also will be met.

Christians will receive the guarantee that Lebanon will not become part of a larger Moslem Arab federation.

And to satisfy another Christian demand, Syria will guarantee that Palestine guerrillas, who have supported Moslems in the civil war, will respect Lebanese sovereignty and abide by agreements covering their presence in Lebanon.

Libyan, Front Said Attack Masterminds

Cairo, Egypt (UPI) — A

leading Egyptian journalist Friday accused Libyan strongman Col. Moammar Khadafy and an extremist Palestinian group of masterminding the terrorist attack on the headquarters of the world oil cartel.

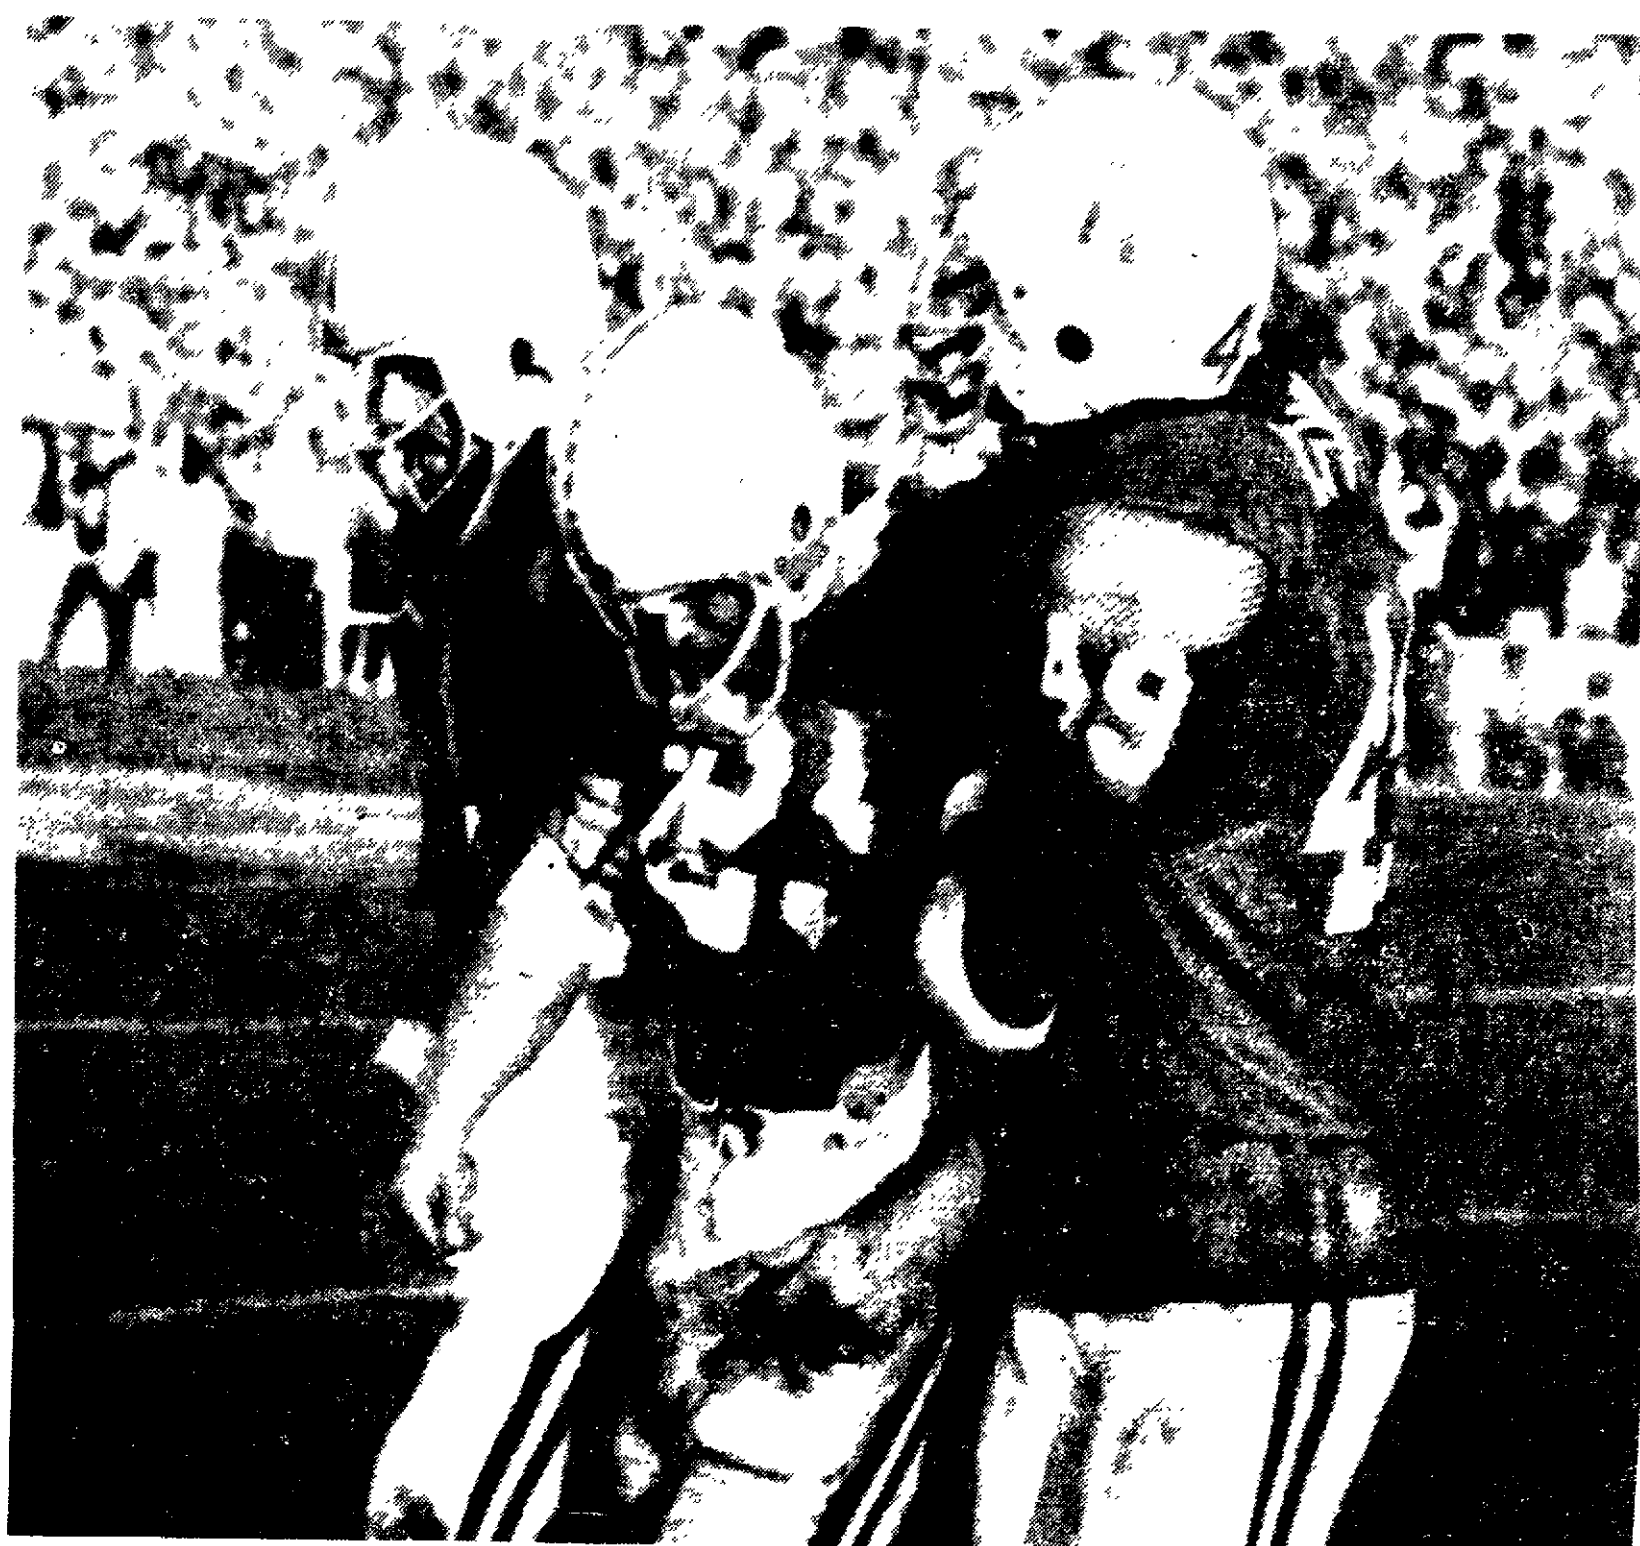

He also said that the international terrorist known as "Carlos" was paid millions of dollars to lead the raid.

"The governments of several countries have received important information that it was Col. Moammar Khadafy who financed the operation in which Arab oil ministers were abducted," Ali Amin, board chairman of the Akhbar newspaper chain, said in a front-page story in the weekly Akhbar el Yom.

"The information received also says that some members of the Popular Front (for the Liberation of Palestine) contacted the international terrorist Carlos . . . and arranged with him to carry out the operation in return for several million dollars which were paid in advance. It was agreed that several millions more would be paid following the operation."

Six terrorists raided the headquarters of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna Sunday and took 10 oil ministers hostage, later releasing them and 25 other captives in Algiers and Tripoli.

Student Hooked On Theater

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

"You can control the audience in your hands — that's the nearest part," said aspiring thespian Cindy Watkins.

But it's not a lust for power that keeps the Southeast High School senior fascinated with theater.

In fact, more of her theater involvement has been behind the scenes than facing an audience. But she hopes to change that soon.

An interest in drama cropped up in her junior year, but the real clincher was her participation in the Lincoln Public Schools repertory theater.

"I never learned so much in my whole life in one semester!" she exclaimed.

Working with costumes, make-up, and techniques of acting, as well as performing in several plays, stoked Cindy's warming interest in the dramatic arts.

It's the chance to express herself that most attracts Cindy to theater.

"Sometimes I see different parts of myself in a character," Cindy confided. The trick, she adds, is not to show a characteristic of herself on stage but to create a whole new character. "It's a way of putting your energy where you think it should go."

From the few parts she's played, the 17-year-old finds she likes doing comedy.

"Sometimes I think I'm really funny; I get goofy or strange. Then I think all drama people get that way once in a while."

"You get real close to people each show you do," Cindy said. "If you don't, the show just doesn't go together."

When not on stage, Cindy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Watkins, 2570 Arlene, has been content with active backstage roles. Like choreographing Southeast's fall musical and being assistant director for the school's dramatic production.

She also found time to be in a play for student teachers in UNL's theater department, as well as run the props for the Community Playhouse's production of "Championship Season."

Cindy is not relaxing at home this holiday season but is busy preparing for her parts, both on and off stage. In "The Red Shoes," a children's production scheduled for five performances Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the playhouse.

For Cindy, theater is "a celebration of life" and one she is trying to live to the fullest.

Heroin Traffic Worries Ford

— The New York Times

Vail, Colo. — President Ford expressed concern Friday about the entry of heroin from Mexico into the United States and said he would soon send to Congress a message proposing "a broad government response" to the drug-abuse problem in this country.

In a statement issued at this Rocky Mountain resort, where he is on a week-long skiing vacation, Ford said he had directed Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger "to express to the Mexican government my personal concern that we explore opportunities for improved control."

He said he had already spoken with the leaders of Mexico, Colombia and Turkey "to strengthen cooperation of other nations involved in the fight against the illicit drug traffic."

Ford said he had also endorsed a "white paper" on drug abuse published in October by his Domestic Council. That report, which had suggested concentrating law enforcement activities against heroin and other hard drugs, as well as on reducing drug supplies at their source rather than spending enforcement activities on "street level" activities, caused some controversy. Government agencies involved in drug control have challenged some of the council's findings.

The President also announced Friday the appointment of John G. Carlson as his deputy press secretary, succeeding William I. Greener, who was recently appointed assistant secretary of defense for public affairs.

The 35-year-old Carlson, a native of Tacoma, Wash., had been assistant press secretary for domestic affairs and has been on the White House staff since April 1972.

Kids Chip In, Buy Buffalo For Folks' Christmas Gift

Evans, Colo. (UPI) — Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wadsworth have eight children, two horses, four cows, 11 dogs, two cats — and a 300-pound buffalo.

The buffalo, as yet unnamed, is the latest addition to the family household, located on five acres of property southeast of Greeley. It was a surprise gift to the Wadsworths from their youngsters.

"They're always trying to come up with something different for Christmas, but this was the biggest surprise yet — in more ways than one," Mrs. Wadsworth said. "It's certainly something we never expected."

She and her husband, who runs a furniture store in the community of Evans, discovered the buffalo after opening a large gift-wrapped box on Christmas Eve. Inside was a note telling them to look inside the van parked in their garage.

When the couple walked outdoors and opened the van doors, they found themselves staring into the face of a buffalo calf. The youngsters, ranging in age from 11 to 31, had pooled their money to buy the animal and then brought it to their home, three miles east of Evans, in a van.

"We thought it sounded like a neat idea," said Anita, 14. "It was different from anything else. My brothers-in-law and sisters got the idea when they were returning home from a skiing trip at Lake Eldora."

She said they drove by a buffalo ranch and decided a calf would be the perfect gift for their parents.

"Well, at least we knew it was something they sure didn't have," Anita said. "And I think we surprised them with it."

"They usually never surprise my husband," Mrs. Wadsworth added. "But this time they certainly succeeded. Who would have ever thought of a buffalo for a Christmas gift?"

Mrs. Wadsworth said she wasn't certain yet what they would do with the animal, but she said it was unlikely it would be used for a buffalo barbecue.

Consumer Price Index Doesn't Measure Cost Of Living

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

From school children to senior citizens, millions of Americans are finding their lives closely linked to the much publicized, but little understood Consumer Price Index.

The government estimates that the family incomes of about half the nation's population are tied to the index. Each 1 per cent rise in the indicator triggers an increase of at least $1 billion in income according to Labor Department officials who compile the index.

Contrary to popular belief, however, the index does not measure the cost of living. It isn't designed to.

An increase in the Consumer Price Index does not necessarily mean a boost in your day to day expenses. Conversely, a decrease in the index may not show up at all in your family budget.

The Consumer Price Index does not include income and Social Security taxes since they are not directly associated with retail prices of goods and services. It also does not reflect noncash consumption — food grown at home or fringe benefits on a job, for example.

Here are some questions and answers about the Consumer Price Index.

Q What is the index?

A The Consumer Price Index measures the cost of a specific marketbasket of goods and services and compares the total with the cost of the same goods and services at an earlier time. The index is published once a month, the current base period against which today's prices are compared is 1967.

Q What sort of items does it measure?

A The index covers almost 400 items — from basics such as food to extras such as bowling fees. Each item is weighted according to its importance in the family budget. The list for the current index was drawn up in 1961-62 and does not reflect the introduction of new products from wigs to stereo sets. The Labor Department is updating its marketbasket and expects the revision to be finished by 1977.

Q Where are the items measured?

A Prices are obtained in urban portions of 39 major statistical areas and 17 smaller cities chosen to represent the entire nation.

The sample is being expanded to 85 areas in the revised index. About 18,000 retail establishments are checked. Prices of foods, fuels and a few other items are checked every month in each location. Prices of most other goods and services are collected every month in the five largest areas and every three months in other areas.

In addition to the national index, the government publishes separate indexes for 23 cities. (There will be separate indexes for 28 cities when the revised indicator is completed.)

Q When did the Consumer Price Index begin?

A The index grew out of a World War I labor agreement in the shipbuilding industry. The original index and all later revisions were based on the spending habits of urban wage earners and clerical workers, who now comprise about 35 or 40 per cent of the population. In connection with its revision of this index, the government is designing an indicator called the All Urban Households Index to cover about 80 per cent of the population.

Q Why don't I always see index changes reflected in my budget?

A There are several reasons.

— A price boost may affect a limited area. A transit fare increase in New York, for example, will drive up the national index by a tiny fraction of a per cent, but it won't directly boost costs for people in the rest of the country.

— Consumers tend to adjust shopping habits to the prices they find. If the cost of certain meats goes up, for example, people may switch to other cuts and overall spending will not change.

— No one is likely to buy all the items measured by the index each month. In November, for example, the index showed consumer prices rose seven-tenths of one per cent. Part of the increase was due to higher prices for new cars. If you are not buying a new car, you won't be affected by this part of the increase in the index.

— The spending habits of more than half the population — retired people, the unemployed and professionals included — are not reflected in the current index.

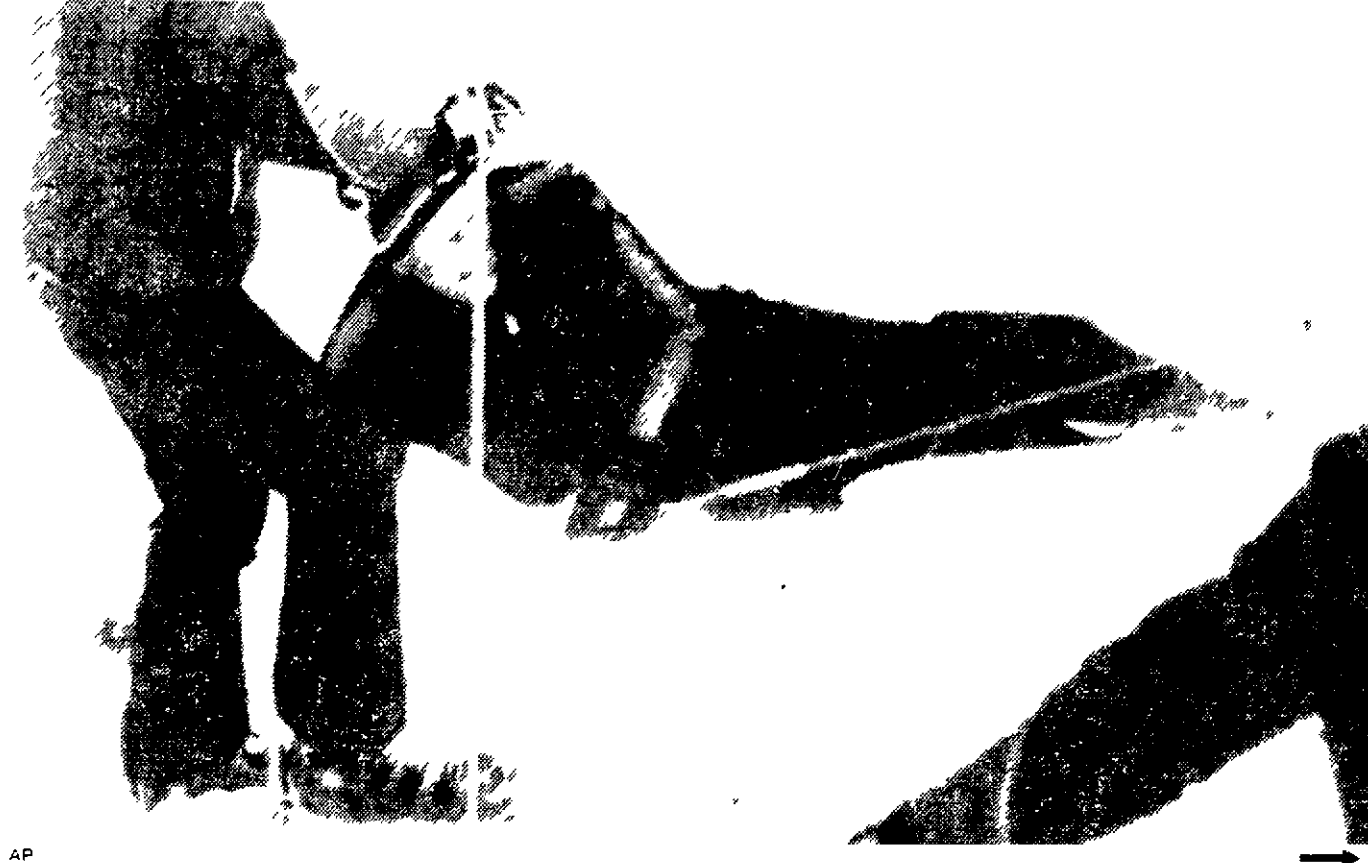

— The Labor Department publishes both adjusted and unadjusted data. The unadjusted information reflects actual price changes, the adjusted figures take seasonal variations into account. If fruit goes up less than it normally does at a particular time of the year, for example, the seasonally adjusted report may show no change, even though you are paying more.

Q If changes in the index are not always reflected in the family budget, how does the indicator affect so many lives?

A The index affects people through its function as an escalator. The government estimates that more than 51 million persons are covered by collective bargaining agreements that contain clauses providing for wage increases when the Consumer Price Index goes up. Some agreements link the index to pensions for retired workers. (Note: most of these clauses are called "cost of living escalators" even though the index doesn't really measure the cost of living.)

Changes in the Consumer Price Index also affect the amount of money received by almost 29 million Social Security recipients, 2 million retired military and Federal Civil Service employees and survivors, 600,000 postal workers and about 13 million food stamp recipients.

The national average rates for school lunches and breakfasts eaten by 24 million children are adjusted to reflect changes in the index, the poverty threshold estimate used in many federal, state and local health and benefit programs is tied to the Consumer Price Index.

FORD FALLS . . . while skiing. Olympic team coach rates him an 'expert' at skiing.

Famous Skier Takes Tumble

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — President Ford, skiing on tender knees, won a rating of "expert" Friday from the head coach of the U.S. ski team although he tumbled once in full view of reporters and photographers observing his performance on Vail Mountain.

Skied with one U.S. ski team member and several team officials, Ford made two runs down the slope although he said before leaving his house that his knees were "acting up a little bit."

Skung about 50 yards from reporters on the mountain, Ford lost his balance and tumbled as he attempted to make a turn to the right. The President bounced back up on his skis without assistance, however, and resumed his downhill run.

Hank Tauber, head U.S. ski team coach and one of the President's skiing partners for the day, told reporters Ford could qualify for the team "as an alternate for sure, really."

He's a fine skier. I'll tell you. He's advanced, he's not an intermediate skier. He's an expert. No kidding. Tauber said.

Susie Patterson, 20, a slalom skier on the U.S. team, said she was really impressed at the way the 62-year-old chief executive handled himself on the slope.

Ford said Miss Patterson had taught him a couple of things on their two runs, including how to keep my feet.

Asked whether he ever thought of politics while skiing, the President put his arm around the resident of Sun Valley, Idaho and replied, "Not when I'm skiing with Susan."

Syria Denies Stories Of Crackdown On Communists

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A Syrian government spokesman accused Egyptian newspapers Friday of trying to embarrass President Hafez Assad during the visit here of Saudi Arabia's King Khaled by reporting an alleged Syrian crackdown on Communists.

The Saudi monarch arrived Thursday on a mission to patch up the bitter feud between Syria and Egypt that erupted after Egypt signed the U.S.-negotiated Sinai accord with Israel last fall. Syria called it a sellout of the Arab cause.

The spokesman denied the reports in the government-guided Egyptian newspapers Al-Ahram and Al-Akhbar that 300 members of the Syrian Communist party had been arrested.

As far as I know, not one member of the party is in jail, he said.

The reports in the Cairo newspapers said the secretary-general of the Syrian Communist party, Khaled Bakdash, sensed trouble and fled the country to avoid arrest.

They added that President Assad was so angry at this that he ordered the arrest of the head of the passport department and the director of airport security.

But the Syrian spokesman said Bakdash, 63, one of the most prominent Arab Communists, attended a reception at the North Vietnamese Embassy in Damascus two days ago.

He can walk the streets as freely as anyone else, he added.

Information Ministry officials told Associated Press correspondent Edward Cody they were unable to arrange an immediate interview with Bakdash, saying they had to clear the request with Information Minister Ahmed Iskandar and he was tied up with Khaled's visit.

Syria closed its border with Lebanon for six hours Friday, but the pro-Syrian Palestinian guerrilla leader Zuhair Mohsen said in Beirut it was not connected to the anti-Communist action. He refused to elaborate. Observers in Beirut said Syria was bent on avoiding charges by Lebanese Christian leaders that Syrian and Palestinian gunmen were infiltrating Lebanon to fight on the Moslem side in the civil war.

If the reports in the Egyptian press are true, the arrests represent the second reported wave of internal unrest in Syria this year. Earlier, Assad was said to have arrested more than 100 members of his own Baath Socialist party before the annual party congress. Reports of these arrests first appeared abroad and were never confirmed or denied by the authoritarian regime.

A crackdown on the Syrian Communist party now could be construed by Assad's opponents as an attempt to please the anti-

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The U.S. Embassy said Friday a fifth American worker has been kidnapped from the Kagnew communications base outside Asmara, capital of the rebellious northern province of Eritrea.

An embassy spokesman identified the missing man as Ronald B. Mischalke of Mabel, Minn. and said he was seized by a group of unidentified armed men. Other sources said he was probably taken by the Eritrean Liberation Front which is holding four other Americans kidnapped in July and November.

The ELF has been fighting for independence from Ethiopia for 14 years.

The embassy spokesman said the Ethiopian government has been asked to do what it could to

Elections Set In '76 In Vietnam

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnamese Defense Minister Vo Nguyen Giap said general elections will be held in 1976 in both North and South Vietnam for the establishment of a national assembly for all of Vietnam.

We will have one national assembly for the whole country and thus one central government for the whole Vietnam, Giap said in an interview with TFL, a channel of the French state-owned television system. The interview broadcast Friday was made in Cuba where Giap led a Vietnamese delegation to the Cuban Communist party congress from Dec. 16 to Dec. 22.

Vietnam now is reunified, Giap said. The question now is to reunify it in terms of the state administration. By unanimous agreement we will organize general and democratic elections in 1976.

Giap said the late President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam always had led the Vietnamese people from south to north, during the war for independence.

Vietnam Top Story

By The Associated Press

The fall of Vietnam and Cambodia has been voted the top news story of 1975.

In their annual Top Ten poll, editors and news directors of Associated Press member newspapers and radio and TV stations decided the second most important story of the year was the attempts to assassinate President Ford. The capture of Patricia Hearst placed third in the voting.

The Watergate scandal was the top story of 1974. This year, the editors and news directors placed Watergate aftermath stories seventh.

Only one other story on the 1974 Top Ten list appeared again this year. It was the economy, fifth with 2,511 votes this year and second in 1974. The Indochina fighting in 1974 a year after American involvement had ended, was not among the Top Ten stories last year.

The Top Ten stories of 1975, in the order of their selection were:

- 1 The fall of Vietnam and Cambodia
- 2 The two assassination attempts against President Ford
- 3 The capture of Patty Hearst
- 4 The New York City fiscal crisis
- 5 The American economy — inflation, recession and the start of recovery
- 6 Cambodia's capture of the container ship Mayaguez in May and the use of American military force to free her
- 7 The Watergate aftermath, including the sentencing by Judge John J. Sirica in February of H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell
- 8 The revelations of questionable CIA activities
- 9 Ford's cabinet reshuffle in November and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's decision to drop out as Ford's 1976 running mate
- 10 The disappearance of James Hoffa, the former Teamsters union president

Consumer Price Index Doesn't Measure Cost Of Living

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

From school children to senior citizens, millions of Americans are finding their lives closely linked to the much publicized, but little understood Consumer Price Index.

The government estimates that the family incomes of about half the nation's population are tied to the index. Each 1 per cent rise in the indicator triggers an increase of at least $1 billion in income, according to Labor Department officials who compile the index.

Contrary to popular belief, however, the index does not measure the cost of living. It isn't designed to.

An increase in the Consumer Price Index does not necessarily mean a boost in your day-to-day expenses. Conversely, a decrease in the index may not show up at all in your family budget.

The Consumer Price Index does not include income and Social Security taxes since they are not directly associated with retail prices of goods and services; it also does not reflect noncash consumption — food grown at home or fringe benefits on a job, for example.

Here are some questions and answers about the Consumer Price Index.

Q. What is the index?

A. The Consumer Price Index measures the cost of a specific marketbasket of goods and services and compares the total with the cost of the same goods and services at an earlier time. The index is published once a month; the current base period against which today's prices are compared is 1967.

Q. What sort of items does it measure?

A. The index covers almost 400 items — from basics such as food to extras such as bowling fees. Each item is weighted according to its importance in the family budget. The list for the current index was drawn up in 1961-62 and does not reflect the introduction of new products from wigs to stereo sets. The Labor Department is updating its marketbasket and expects the revision to be finished by 1977.

Q. Where are the items measured?

A. Prices are obtained in urban portions of 39 major statistical areas and 17 smaller cities, chosen to represent the entire nation.

(The sample is being expanded to 85 areas in the revised index.) About 18,000 retail establishments are checked. Prices of foods, fuels and a few other items are checked every month in each location. Prices of most other goods and services are collected every month in the five largest areas and every three months in other areas.

In addition to the national index, the government publishes separate indexes for 23 cities. (There will be separate indexes for 28 cities when the revised indicator is completed.)

Q. When did the Consumer Price Index begin?

A. The index grew out of a World War I labor agreement in the shipbuilding industry. The original index and all later revisions were based on the spending habits of urban wage earners and clerical workers, who now comprise about 35 or 40 per cent of the population. In connection with its revision of this index, the government is designing an indicator called the "All-Urban Households Index" to cover about 80 per cent of the population.

Q. Why don't I always see index changes reflected in my budget?

A. There are several reasons:
—A price boost may affect a limited area. A transit fare increase in New York, for example, will drive up the national index by a tiny fraction of a per cent, but it won't directly boost costs for people in the rest of the country.

—Consumers tend to adjust shopping habits to the prices they find. If the cost of certain meats goes up, for example, people may switch to other cuts and overall spending will not change.

—No one is likely to buy all the items measured by the index each month. In November, for example, the index showed consumer prices rose seven-tenths of one per cent. Part of the increase was due to higher prices for new cars. If you are not buying a new car, you won't be affected by this part of the increase in the index.

—The spending habits of more than half the population — retired people, the unemployed and professionals, included — are not reflected in the current index.

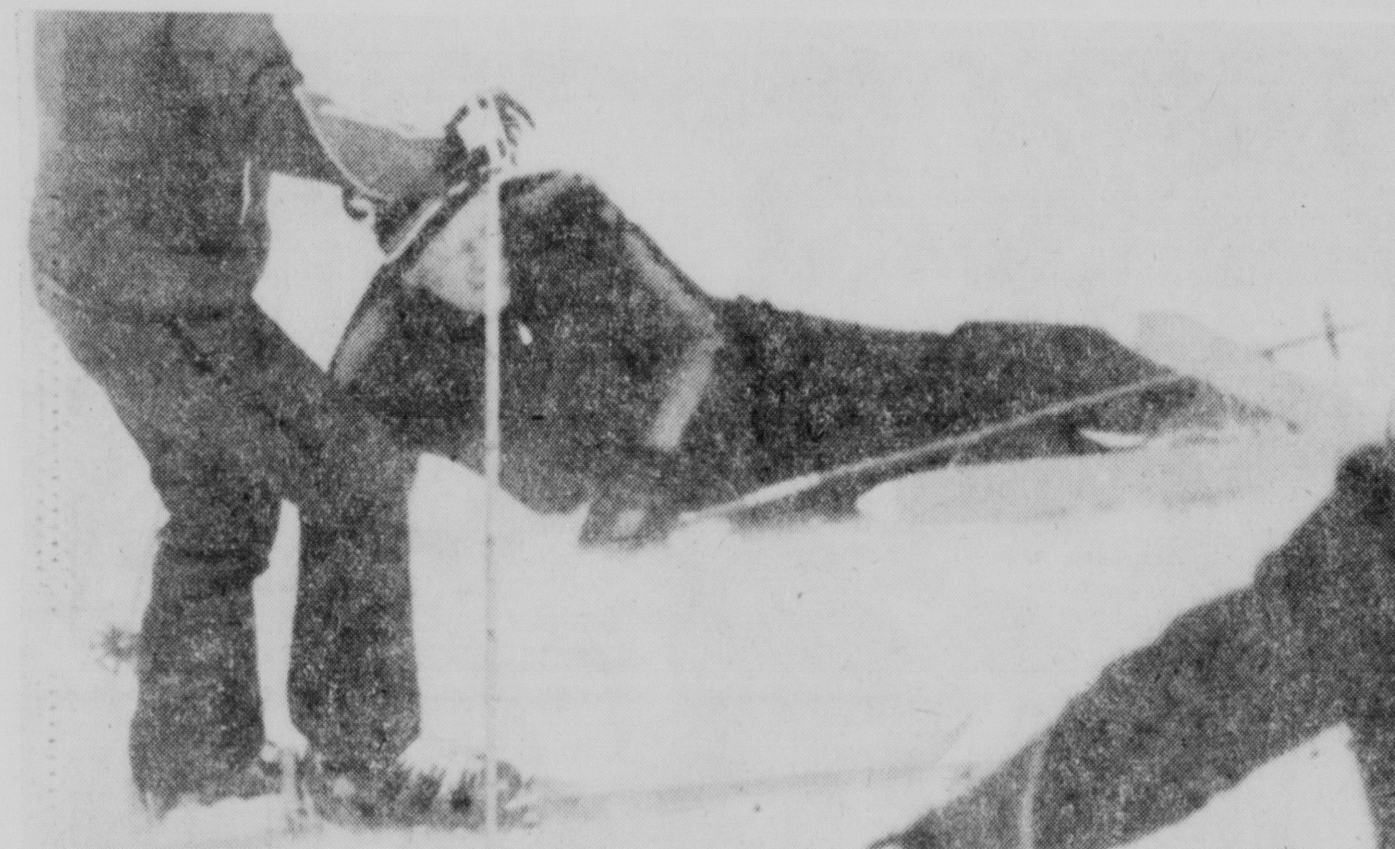

—The Labor Department publishes both adjusted and unadjusted data. The unadjusted information reflects actual price changes; the adjusted figures take seasonal variations into account. If fruit goes up less than it normally does at a particular time of the year, for example, the seasonally adjusted report may show no change, even though you are paying more.

Q. If changes in the index are not always reflected in the family budget, how does the indicator affect so many lives?

A. The index affects people through its function as an escalator. The government estimates that more than 5.1 million persons are covered by collective bargaining agreements that contain clauses providing for wage increases when the Consumer Price Index goes up. Some agreements link the index to pensions for retired workers. (Note: most of these clauses are called "cost of living escalators" even though the index doesn't really measure the cost of living.)

Changes in the Consumer Price Index also affect the amount of money received by almost 29 million Social Security recipients, 2 million retired military and Federal Civil Service employees and survivors, 600,000 postal workers and about 13 million food stamp recipients.

The national average rates for school lunches and breakfasts eaten by 24 million children are adjusted to reflect changes in the index; the poverty threshold estimate used in many federal, state and local health and benefit programs is tied to the Consumer Price Index.

FORD FALLS ... while skiing. Olympic team coach rates him an 'expert' at skiing.

Famous Skier Takes Tumble

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — President Ford, skiing on tender knees, won a rating of "expert" Friday from the head coach of the U.S. ski team although he tumbled once in full view of reporters and photographers observing his performance on Vail Mountain.

Skating with one U.S. ski team member and several team officials, Ford made two runs down the slope although he said before leaving his house that his knees were "acting up a little bit."

Skating about 50 yards from reporters on the mountain, Ford lost his balance and tumbled as he attempted to make a turn to the right. The President bounced back up on his skis without assistance, however, and resumed his downhill run.

Hank Tauber, head U.S. ski team coach and one of the President's skiing partners for the day, told reporters Ford could qualify for the team "as an alternate for sure, really."

"He's a fine skier. I'll tell you. He's advanced, he's not an intermediate skier. He's an expert. No kidding," Tauber said.

Susie Patterson, 20, a slalom skier on the U.S. team, said she was "really impressed" at the way the 62-year-old chief executive handled himself on the slope.

Ford said Miss Patterson had taught him a "couple of things" on their two runs, including "how to keep my feet."

Asked whether he ever thought of politics while skiing, the President put his arm around the resident of Sun Valley, Idaho, and replied: "Not when I'm skiing with Susan."

Syria Denies Stories Of Crackdown On Communists

The Saudi monarch arrived Thursday on a mission to patch up the bitter feud between Syria and Egypt that erupted after Egypt signed the U.S.-negotiated Sinai accord with Israel last fall. Syria called it a sellout of the Arab cause.

The spokesman denied the reports in the government-guided Egyptian newspapers Al Ahram and Al Akhbar that 300

members of the Syrian Communist party had been arrested.

"As far as I know, not one member of the party is in jail," he said.

The reports in the Cairo newspapers said the secretary-general of the Syrian Communist party, Khaled Bakdash, sensed trouble and fled the country to avoid arrest.

They added that President Assad was so angry at this that he ordered the arrest of the head of the passport department and the director of airport security.

But the Syrian spokesman said Bakdash, 63, one of the most prominent Arab Communists, attended a reception at the North Vietnamese Embassy in Damascus two days ago.

"He can walk the streets as freely as anyone else," he added.

Information Ministry officials told Associated Press correspondent Edward Cody they were unable to arrange an immediate interview with Bakdash, saying they had to clear the request with Information Minister Ahmed Iskandar, and he was tied up with Khalid's visit.

Syria closed its border with Lebanon for six hours Friday, but the pro-Syrian Palestinian guerrilla leader Zuhair Mohsen said in Beirut it was not connected to the anti-Communist action. He refused to elaborate.

Observers in Beirut said Syria was bent on avoiding charges by Lebanese Christian leaders that Syrian and Palestinian gunmen were infiltrating Lebanon to fight on the Moslem side in the civil war.

If the reports in the Egyptian press are true, the arrests represent the second reported wave of internal unrest in Syria this year. Earlier, Assad was said to have arrested more than 100 members of his own Baath Socialist party before the annual party congress. Reports of these arrests first appeared abroad and were never confirmed or denied by the authoritarian regime.

A crackdown on the Syrian Communist party now could be construed by Assad's opponents as an attempt to please the anti-Communist Saudis at the expense of the Soviet Union.

The Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar said Assad was adopting a more independent line by moving toward the West. As evidence, it cited a reported Syrian request to the United States to provide emergency food aid in the form of corn, rice, margarine and soybeans.

Syria recently allowed Western oil men into the country for the first time to prospect, saying Russian methods and equipment were outmoded.

Both Al Ahram and Al Akhbar said there was criticism within the Baath party of Assad's policy. They mentioned his planned visit to Iran. The critics are said to have asserted that a visit to the pro-Western shah is not consistent with the party's radical Socialist ideology.

Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat made a special trip to Damascus to confer with Khalid.

After a one-hour meeting with the Saudi monarch at the official Syrian guest house, Arafat told reporters, "I came from Beirut to meet with his majesty because of the large number of plots which the Arab cause is facing."

Arafat did not elaborate. It was believed he referred at least in part to the Lebanese civil war, in which his movement has become involved.

American Abducted, Probably By Eritrean Liberation Front

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The U.S. Embassy said Friday a fifth American worker has been kidnapped from the Kagnew communications base outside Asmara, capital of the rebellious northern province of Eritrea.

An embassy spokesman identified the missing man as Ronald B. Mischalke of Mabel, Minn., and said he was seized by a group of unidentified armed men. Other sources said he was probably taken by the Eritrean Liberation Front which is holding four other Americans kidnapped in July and November.

The ELF has been fighting for independence from Ethiopia for 14 years.

The embassy spokesman said the Ethiopian government has been asked to do what it could to recover Mischalke. The same request has been made in the case of the other four, without success so far.

The embassy said Mischalke was a civilian employee of Collins International Service Co. at the communications base.

In Mabel, Minn., Mischalke's sister, Mrs. Roger Garre, said he had worked on satellite communications in many parts of the world as an employee of Collins and other firms.

She said he was 38 and unmarried. The family was told he had been taken away by five armed men who entered his house, kidnapped him and an Ethiopian houseboy and took with them all the food in the house, she added.

Those seized earlier were

Navy PO 3.C. Thomas C. Bowidowicz of Jersey City, N.J., and Army Spec. 5 David Strickland of Orlando, Fla., in November and Steve Campbell of San Leonardo, Calif., and Jim Harrell of Milwaukee, Wis., in July.

An ELF spokesman reported in Beirut in November that all four were being held in a mountain hideout in northern Eritrea and were in "perfect physical condition."

"They are well treated and well fed and have even developed personal friendships with their guards," he said. "They are not locked up but move about freely in the camp premises during the day. At night they sleep in four separate beds with one rebel guarding the hut."

Christmas Season Selling Shows Increase Over '74

By The Associated Press
Merchants around the country tallied up Christmas-season selling Friday and reported double-digit sales increases over last year. Luxury items and clothes sold well, pet rocks and mood rings were the fads and some stores nearly ran out of expensive gift wrapping.

Day-after-Christmas shopping was heavy in many cities, but rough weather cut down the activity in some areas.

Rain, snow and ice bottled up New England. There were four inches of fresh snow in Detroit, heavy fog in Northern California, and a tornado watch in some Southeastern states.

Friday was a holiday for most federal employees and some businesses and local governments also gave workers the day off to make four-day weekends.

The National Safety Council reported that at least 173 persons had died in traffic accidents since Christmas Eve. The council predicted up to 500 traffic deaths by Sunday night.

The Christmas joy continued for many people. Despite a cold rain in New York City, crowds of visitors stopped in Rockefeller Center to look at the Christmas lights.

And in Charlotte, N.C., 20 drunks and vagrants were back on the streets with a good Christmas meal under their belts. Sheriff Donald Stahl and 20 deputies rounded them up on street corners, took them to the jail house for a turkey-and-trimmings dinner and carted them back to where they found them.

President Ford was on the ski slopes at Vail, Colo., again Friday as the First Family continued its Christmas holiday in the Rocky Mountains.

But there was sadness and tragedy for some.

Deborah Mackall was still waiting for word of 4-year-old daughter and 2-year-old son, missing since Christmas Eve when she left them briefly in a New York department store while she went to buy toys.

Authorities in New Britain, Conn., said Friday they now believe that two men who died in a Christmas morning house fire may have been the victims of intruders who broke into the house and poured gasoline on them.

Reports from both downtown department stores and suburban shopping centers indicated that Christmas shopping exceeded expectations. Compared to last year, sales increases of 15% to 45% were reported in Washington, 25% in Richmond, Va.; 25% in Milwaukee, Wis., and 10% in San Francisco.

Black negligees and microwave ovens sold well at J. L. Hudson Co. in Detroit, jewelry and furs did well at Thalhimers in Richmond, Va., and Jordan Marsh Co. in Boston reported good sales in calculators and digital watches.

"The customer has money and he's willing to spend it. He's not as pessimistic as he was last year," explained Morton Huff, chairman of one of St. Louis' leading retailers, the Famous-Barr Co. Huff said Christmas selling at his store was "exceptional."

Dan Sharkey, a vice president for Dillards in Little Rock, Ark., said shoppers "were in a buying mood."

"The best indication of how well we did is that last year few people were willing to pay for luxury gift wrapping," said Sharkey. "This year people were willing to pay the extra dollar or two. We nearly ran out of wrapping paper and had to scrounge to find some."

Nazareth Gets Red Moslem Mayor

The New York Times
Tel Aviv — Nazareth, the Galilean town where Jesus grew up, got a Soviet-trained, Communist Moslem mayor Friday with the inauguration of Toufik Zayad.

Zayad, who has militantly opposed the Israeli government as a member of parliament, pledged in his inaugural speech to keep politics out of city hall and to concentrate on the development of Nazareth.

The mayor, a nonpracticing

Moslem, also extended the city's Christmas greetings to Pope Paul VI and the Christian world and invoking the New Testament in his speech.

Outlining plans for improvement in the city, he quoted from St. Matthew 4:4, "Man shall not live by bread alone."

Zayad, who was elected Dec. 9, offered cooperation with the government and neighboring Jewish localities, which had interpreted his landslide election victory as a sign that Israeli Arabs were turning away from coexistence with the Jewish state.

Gun Control Column Draws Fire

By JOANNE FARRIS
I guess I should have realized what a hornet's nest I was stirring up with my comment recently about the need for gun control. Here are a few of the more temperate responses:

"It appears that you are deliberately attempting to further frighten and deceive many of our already scared senior citizens into writing their Congressmen to assist you in your own personal anti-gun crusade. Why don't you use your journalistic know-how to research the problem of street violence and then influence people to insist on the enforcement of existing firearm laws and the enactment of laws that would provide tougher and mandatory sentences for using firearms in the commission of a crime?" (See comments below on the 1975 Massachusetts firearm law.)

"Most elderly people are unable to defend themselves against physical abuse. It is indeed a truism that the best defense is a good offense. Some years ago in Sarasota, Fla., a wave of crime committed against housewives home alone during the day prompted the Police Department to institute hand-gun instruction for those who wished to take part.

"In less than two weeks more than 100 housewives had signed up for the four-to-six week course. The crime wave ceased. The police of San Diego, Calif., are presently conducting a similar course which has been well received by the residents. No rip-off artist will chance a mark that can defend himself. There's not much solace in a firearms regulation that disarms you, but is ignored by the intruders."

In your article in this morning's paper you are stating the idea promoted by the liberals in the news media and government so that we will favor more gun control laws. I think you are wrong. I disagree and many others feel that the rise in crime is due to leniency toward criminals and the idea that crime is not the fault of the criminal, but of society.

"If criminals knew that punishment would be swift and sure and that law-abiding citizens have guns and know how to use them, then crime would be greatly reduced."

The letters speak ably for themselves.

A recent Gallup Poll quizzed a cross section of American adults regarding the new Massachusetts gun-licensing law. This law provides that any person who carries a gun outside his home must have a license to do so. And anyone convicted of carrying a gun without a license will receive a mandatory sentence of one year in jail.

More than 75% of the nation's adults approve the license requirement, according to the poll. Among gun owners, 64 to 76% agreed with the licensing law, depending on how many guns they own. The second part of the law is more acceptable to nongun owners, though nationwide 53% of all adults approve the mandatory year's jail sentence for carrying an unlicensed gun.

Strict licensing laws for handguns and strong safe-gun-use programs by local police departments for those who are licensed to have guns deserve our thoughtful consideration.

Christmas Season Selling Shows Increase Over '74

By The Associated Press
Merchants around the country totalled up Christmas-season selling Friday and reported double-digit sales increases over last year. Luxury items and clothes sold well, pet rocks and mood rings were the fads and some stores nearly ran out of expensive gift wrapping.

Day-after-Christmas shopping was heavy in many cities, but rough weather cut down the activity in some areas.

Rain, snow and ice bottled up New England. There were four inches of fresh snow in Detroit; heavy fog in Northern California, and a tornado watch in some Southeastern states.

Friday was a holiday for most federal employees and some businesses and local governments also gave workers the day off to make four-day weekends.

The National Safety Council reported that at least 173 persons had died in traffic accidents since Christmas Eve. The council predicted up to 500 traffic deaths by Sunday night.

The Christmas joy continued for many people. Despite a cold rain in New York City, crowds of visitors stopped in Rockefeller Center to look at the Christmas lights.

And in Charlotte, N.C., 20 drunks and vagrants were back on the streets with a good Christmas meal under their belts. Sheriff Donald Stahl and 20 deputies rounded them up on street corners, took them to the jail house for a turkey-and-trimmings dinner and carted them back to where they found them.

President Ford was on the ski slopes at Vail, Colo., again Friday as the First Family continued its Christmas holiday in the Rocky Mountains. But there was sadness and tragedy for some.

Deborah Mackall was still waiting for word of 4-year-old daughter and 2-year-old son, missing since Christmas Eve when she left them briefly in a New York department store while she went to buy toys.

Authorities in New Britain, Conn., said Friday they now believe that two men who died in a Christmas morning house fire may have been the victims of intruders who broke into the house and poured gasoline on them.

Reports from both downtown department stores and suburban shopping centers indicated that Christmas shopping exceeded expectations. Compared to last year, sales increases of 15% to 45% were reported in Washington; 25% in Richmond, Va.; 25% in Milwaukee, Wis., and 10% in San Francisco.

Black negligees and microwave ovens sold well at J. L. Hudson Co. in Detroit; jewelry and furs did well at Thalhimers in Richmond, Va.; and Jordan Marsh Co. in Boston reported good sales in calculators and digital watches.

"The customer has money and he's willing to spend it. He's not as pessimistic as he was last year," explained Morton Huff, chairman of one of St. Louis' leading retailers, the Famous-Barr Co. Huff said Christmas selling at his store was "exceptional."

Dan Sharkey, a vice president for Dillards in Little Rock, Ark., said shoppers "were in a buying mood."

"The best indication of how well we did is that last year few people were willing to pay for luxury gift wrapping," said Sharkey. "This year people were willing to pay the extra dollar or two. We nearly ran out of wrapping paper and had to scrounge to find some."

Nazareth Gets Red Moslem Mayor

©The New York Times

Tel Aviv — Nazareth, the Galilean town where Jesus grew up, got a Soviet-trained, Communist Moslem mayor Friday with the inauguration of Toufik Zayad.

Zayad, who has militantly opposed the Israeli government as a member of parliament, pledged in his inaugural speech to keep politics out of city hall and to concentrate on the development of Nazareth.

The mayor, a nonpracticing

New Home For Thousands

This year finds 140,000 Vietnamese refugees living in the United States. They were brought out following the fall of the Saigon government, taken to processing camps scattered across the country and outside the country and then resettled in every state of the union.

The camps are closed, now. They are empty, but the process of assimilation continues and for many of the Vietnamese, the process is a difficult one because of the differences of language and culture and the employment situation.

In Nebraska, there are some 1,179 new Americans of Vietnamese background. Hopefully their lot at this holiday time is a happy one.

Many Nebraska communities, churches and individuals have worked hard to find homes and jobs for the refugees and they are to be commended.

Many of the Vietnamese, we are sure would rather be living in the country of their birth, observing their special days in their own way. But politics has prevented that from happening.

At this time of year which is of special significance to a great majority of Americans, we hope some thought and service can be extended to the refugees. There is much to be said for the argument that we owe something to these people who were supported by but also supportive of this nation during its unfortunate Vietnam involvement.

But more important, caring, hospitality and help are among the best traditions of America.

WASHINGTON — While Secretary Kissinger has escaped the threat of a contempt citation by the congress, his implacable enemies still pursue him determined to drive him out of office.

The opponents are a curious bag, some with sincere policy differences, others with deep personal grievances and many with a strong bias against a secretary of state who holds so much power in the public eye.

One of the most interesting is a man of great intelligence which is matched by the intensity of his conviction that Kissinger must go if the nation is to be saved. When Admiral Elmo Zumwalt retired as chief of naval operations, he began a new career of writing, lecturing with an eventual plunge into politics all aimed at the Kissinger policy.

This was much more than what his predecessor, Admiral Thomas Moorer, did and that was as an old sea dog to join up with Georgetown's center of Strategic Studies. No such calm center of study would suffice for Zumwalt, some of whose Navy associates call him a fanatic.

In testimony before a House committee recently, Zumwalt testified that Kissinger had covered up Soviet violations of the nuclear arms agreement and had deliberately kept them from President Ford. At his press conference just before taking off for Western Europe, Kissinger emphatically and even angrily denied these charges.

Because Zumwalt's distrust of Kissinger goes so much deeper than merely the accusation of a

In four to five years they will be able to win a nuclear war. Or Moscow can give us an ultimatum which, if we reject, the war will begin. It will end with 165 million U.S. casualties as worst crop failure in many, many years.

Tell them: We will sell you our grain if you will agree to stop spending so heavily on armaments and, if at the same though it means a lowering of our standard of living. In short we must emulate Sparta.

As for politics, Zumwalt is now testing the waters with the likelihood he will enter the race for the Senate in Virginia against Harry F. Byrd Jr. next year. He has important allies who believe not only in his ideas but in his future. One is Paul Nitze in whose office, while he was Secretary of the Navy, Zumwalt served. Nitze has already contributed to the limit for a potential Virginia campaign.

As I have said before, the matter of violation of nuclear agreements is so complex as to be beyond the reach of the layman. But I have talked with a high-ranking official who for many years was privy to the top-secret exchanges on nuclear disarmament. He believes it is impossible to conceal violations of the Soviet-U.S. agreement as Zumwalt charged.

I am inclined to accept this view. I reject the Zumwalt thesis that President Ford is Kissinger's captive. Part of this thesis is that the attacks will grow so intense that the President will have to drop his secretary of state before the Republican convention next summer.

This can happen, but in my opinion it would be a damaging blow to American foreign policy.

A Commendable Example

An Associated Press story carried in The Star earlier this week illustrated the escalating cost of energy.

Of greater importance, it illustrated that conservation works.

Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan, in the story about energy-saving at the State Capitol building, said he would "use" the press to make a point. We'll allow ourselves to be used.

Examples cited in the story:

— In 1972 the state used 58,403,400 pounds of steam at a cost of more than $70,000 while paying $1.20 for every 1,000 pounds. Projected 1975 figures show the state will use just 40,571,400 pounds at a cost of $79,256, at a rate of $2.60 per 1,000 pounds. The savings on steam comes to $72,000. If the conservation measures, which include shutting off the steam part of the year and turning down the thermostats, had not been initiated, the state's bill would have been $151,000 based on 1972 usage figures and 1975 rates.

— In 1972 the state spent $20,291 on airconditioning. This year the final cost was $27,963. Given 1972 usage rates, the state would have spent $70,964.

"We used the capitol building as a model for several reasons," Whelan said. "For one thing, if we can do it (save energy) here, anybody can do it in their home, shop or apartment building."

The energy-saving figures are dramatic. The state has set a commendable example.

CHARLES B. SEIB

WASHINGTON — Some news stories come into the world fullblown, demanding banner headlines and the sonnetries of the anchormen from the start. Others almost die aborning, linger awhile and then suddenly blossom.

The story about President Kennedy and the woman with Mafia connections was the second kind, taking a full month to flower into a media event. Its history provides an interesting news business case study.

The story first surfaced on November 16, a Sunday, on page A6 of the Washington Post. The headline was deceptive: "Probers Doubt Kennedy Knew of Poison Plot Against Castro." But the article itself dealt mainly with what it called "a bizarre White House episode" — a relationship between President Kennedy and a young woman named Judith Campbell.

What made the episode bizarre was that the woman also was involved with two Mafia figures, who in turn were involved with the CIA in plotting to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

The Post published the story, based on leaked documents, after considerable soul-searching. The Senate Intelligence Committee had concluded that the matter had no bearing on its investigation of CIA assassination plots. It could be argued, therefore, that the story was a prurient invasion of the personal life of a slain president.

The reporter who wrote the story and his immediate editor were opposed to publishing. The next editor up the line and the managing editor disagreed. The decision was to publish.

As a result of the positioning inside the paper, the unexciting headline and the low key overall tone, disclosure of the "Bizarre episode" caused not a ripple. And except for an unsuccessful attempt to locate Judith Campbell, the Post did not pursue it.

In the meantime, however, two reporters for the Scripps-Howard newspapers' Washington bureau had been working on the Kennedy-Campbell story. On November 18 they sent over the Scripps-Howard news wire a harder-hitting version.

It led off with the assertion that Kennedy's "close association with a woman who had strong ties to top underworld figures caused great concern to then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover."

As in the Post story, the woman was identified by name. The story referred to the many telephone calls between the woman and the White House, as the Post did. It went beyond the Post story in asserting that the President and the woman met many times.

The Scripps-Howard story received front page display in a number of the chain's papers around the country, but again there was no ripple in Washington.

On November 20, the Senate committee issued its report on the CIA and assassinations. It contained a brief discussion of the Campbell matter identifying her only as a "close friend" of Kennedy, with no name or gender.

The next morning, neither the Washington Post, which devoted 15 columns to the report, nor the New York Times, which devoted more than 30 columns to it, mentioned the Kennedy-Campbell relationship.

And that seemed to be that. The story surfaced in two Chicago papers and the Associated Press carried a version, but for the vast majority of Americans it had never existed.

Then, on December 11, William Safire, a columnist for the New York Times, noticed an AP story deep inside the Times. It concerned the FBI's harassment of Martin Luther King, but the last few paragraphs reported an attempt to find out how the Kennedy-Campbell story had leaked out of the Senate committee.

Safire dug into the assassination report and wrote a column. He laid out the Kennedy-Campbell relationship (although he did not name her), theorized that it might have given J. Edgar Hoover useful leverage with the Kennedys, and charged the Senate committee with a cover-up.

The cover-up charge was what the story needed to bring it back to life. The same day Senator

Frank Church, chairman of the committee, issued a denial. The Church denial prompted a front page New York Times story which went into the whole Kennedy-Campbell relationship. The Times' wire service distributed the story across the country, as did the other news services.

(Ironically, both the Safire column and the Times story credited Scripps-Howard rather than the Post with having first disclosed the Campbell matter.)

The next day Judith Campbell — now Mrs. Don Exner — held a press conference in California. That night she was on the evening news shows of all three networks. And the next morning her picture appeared on front pages all across the country.

The story had finally blossomed. What had seemed to be a dead issue in the waning days of November was a very hot item in mid-December.

This all raises two news business questions:

First, was this a legitimate news story? One must say, with some reluctance, that it was. The Kennedy-Campbell-Mafia-CIA connection can't be written off as just another evidence that it's a small world. It is a piece of recent history worth noting, if only for the final tragic twist — the Kennedy assassination by a supporter of Castro.

Also, there was the involvement of our newest national villain, J. Edgar Hoover. As Safire indicated, this may be a piece in the jigsaw puzzle of his behind-the-scenes operations.

A second news business question is, why did it take so long?

That can be blamed in large part on the power of the Washington-New York news axis — meaning the New York Times, the Washington Post, the television networks and the news magazines. A national news story, particularly one concerning official Washington, does not achieve full status until it gets recognition on the axis.

If the Post had hit the story hard on Page One on November 16, it would have taken off at once. Or if the Times or one of the networks or Time or Newsweek had picked up on the lead the Post story provided, we would have been off to the races.

The Scripps-Howard story, hard-hitting and startling though it was, couldn't do the trick. It took the Safire column and the front-page Times story that followed.

All in all, this doesn't add up to one of the proudest moments of American journalism. But then they all can't be Watergates. And disclosure is better than festering rumor.

A News Story Comes Into Being

Humanity In The White House

Well, it finally happened. The world ran out of news.

Consider, if you will, the wire service reports of President Ford's vacation start:

"He was holding two of the family's retrievers on leashes when the hounds started circling, wrapping the leashes around the President's legs. At one point, Ford stumbled over the leashes.

"At Vail, Ford was waving to well-wishers while waiting for the chairlift. He slowly backed into the lift's path and an empty chair struck his back, knocking him slightly off balance. Ford took the next chair."

There you have it. We have a human being for a President.

The stories about the President walking the dogs and backing into the chairlift rank slightly ahead of the stories about his receiving four turtleneck sweaters for Christmas. But only slightly.

Such reports strengthen Spiro Agnew's contention that the media is not only hostile to Republican officeholders, but sometimes irrelevant.

It may not be a fashionable position in the print business, but we are cheered by the President's actions. Here is a guy they play Ruffles and Flourishes for and he does the same dumb things as the clown at the next desk.

It strikes a blow for democracy.

And for Republicanism — Gerald Ford-style, at least.

The Democratic Party's claim on being the peoples' party is shaky. The retrievers and the chair lift have taken care of that. Not to mention the turtle-necks.

Senator Hruska's Vote

Is Roman Hruska a true conservative or is he just pro-Big Business? True conservatives vote their principles regardless of the interests of Big Business. Big Business "conservatives" simply are servants of the corporate giants who hide their indentured status behind a mask of intellectual conservatism.

Senator Hruska's vote this week against the Gravel-Hart amendment shows that he ignored his conservative principles when they conflict with the wishes of the big nuclear companies. He is simply a Big Business conservative.

It is a cardinal tenet of conservative thought that an injured person has constitutional right to sue a person or corporation that injured him for the full extent of his injuries. Denial of this right to sue is a confiscation of property. The present Price-Anderson Act violates this principle by setting an absolute limit of $560 million on the total liability of a utility or any other person responsible for a large nuclear power plant accident. If damages exceed $560 million, injured parties have no recourse in the courts. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission recently concluded that an accident could cause $14 billion in damages.

The amendment offered by Senators Gravel and Hart (MI) would have removed this liability limit and permitted injured persons to sue for their damages. On December 16, Senator Hruska voted against this amendment. The corporate giants of the nuclear industry opposed the Gravel-Hart amendment because without a limit on liability, they could be bankrupted by public liability claims from a nuclear power plant accident.

Why should the public living near a nuclear power plant accept the human risks of nuclear power if the nuclear industry is unwilling to accept the financial risks of nuclear power? Why does Senator Hruska support atomic socialism?

Lincoln, Neb. If indeed letters were mailed to all the people in Lancaster County who were thought to be sympathetic to the sheriff's office and its lynch law tactics, and only $1,200 dollars have been received, my faith in humanity has been partially restored. I expected the county pot to be filled with 30 pieces of silver a million-fold.

Since $2,400 at today's prices are really a bargain when used to beat a possible Murder One charge, perhaps a raffle could be used to raise the balance. First prize could be the riot gun (bronzed to render it harmless) slightly used (to kill my brother and friend, Sherdell). Second prize, one used case of soap guaranteed by the county attorney's office to wash blood off of hands. Third prize, but no less prestigious to win — the hollow point bullet fired into the head of Elijah Chalkers.

Prizes for runners-up could be "Love It Or Leave It" bumper stickers.

PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — A relatively new psychiatric technique called "aversion therapy" has been used successfully to "cure" drug addicts and compulsive gamblers of their self-destructive habits.

The addicts are subjected to hypnosis, and the idea is implanted in their psyches that they will feel deeply nauseated if they see drugs — or cards, or pari-mutuel windows or dice.

This method of nausea-induction, according to California psychologist Barry Singer, should also be tried as therapy for criminals. What Singer has suggested, specifically, is that convicted bank robbers be trained to vomit at the sight of banks.

With the cooperation of banks themselves, he said, a robber could be subjected to a training program which would make him violently ill every time he saw a bank, or a gun, or presumably a knife, vial of acid, and large sums of money. "I think it would be workable," he ventured, "And afterwards, the offender should probably do his banking by mail."

The psychologist, who made his proposals in the California Law Review, stated that his own research indicates that prison is useless in preventing further crime.

In addition to aversion therapy, he suggested some supplementary procedures, which might be especially appropriate in the year of our bicentennial:

"We might require an offender to make a public apology to his victim, who would then ceremoniously forgive him. We might also revive stocks and dunks. Or require him to wear a 'Scarlet Letter.'"

And if all else fails, there's always a judicial spanking by the long arm of the law . . .

Unfortunately, aversion therapy cannot be put to use in the treatment of your routine neighborhood burglar — because he is extremely difficult to put your finger (much less hypnotic gaze) on.

Latest crime statistics show there is one burglary every 10 seconds in America. And only one in five is ever solved.

As a result of this indecent situation, the best offense, against being wiped out materially by burglars, is a good defense. And police are quoted now as saying that most burglaries could have been prevented — if the persons robbed had been able to identify the valuables taken.

I found this difficult to conceive, at first. Whenever I have been burglarized, the police have taken down a description of the stolen items, and then admitted that there wasn't a chance — well, scarcely a chance — of their ever being recovered. And they were absolutely correct.

But Mr. M. Jay Wannamaker, president of the Independent Insurance Agents of America, says that the "ability" of a victim to identify his valuables is, indeed, the only defense against thieves. "Independent insurance agents now have a pen containing invisible fluid," he says, "which will enable householders to identify anything and everything in the home — without defacing it in any way.

"You can mark your sables (ho-ho) with your driver's license number and your original Picasso (of course) with your area code and phone number." This not only assists the police in recovering your property, but — when you apply a decal to a front window or door, which reads: "All items of value on these premises have been marked for ready identification by law enforcement agencies" — even the most creative criminal is likely to beg off.

The IIAs, who conceived the new pen, know this to be true. A couple of years ago they introduced Operation Identification, offering citizens the loan of an electric engraving machine on which they could permanently engrave their hard goods, such as TVs and stereos. Persons who used the system, and applied the warning decals, reported splendid results. Whole cities which participated in the "OP - I.D." (Operation Identification) system noted sharp drops in burglaries for those households using the engraver. The only problem was that soft goods, such as furs, paintings, heirlooms and negotiable bonds, were still vulnerable because owners were afraid to deface them. "The invisible ink pen solves the problem. Those who wish this kind of protection are urged to request the use of the pen from an insurance agent, and are advised to list the marked possessions and file them outside the home — in an office or a safe deposit box.

"Burglars who know you have marked your valuables (our studies show) don't usually break in," claims Wannamaker, "because the marked items are hard to sell, offer the police hard evidence for a conviction and are, therefore, an invitation to jail. Any good burglar knows that."

So now, the only thing we have to worry about are bad burglars . . .

New Home For Thousands

This year finds 140,000 Vietnamese refugees living in the United States. They were brought out following the fall of the Saigon government, taken to processing camps scattered across the country and outside the country and then resettled in every state of the union.

The camps are closed, now. They are empty, but the process of assimilation continues and for many of the Vietnamese, the process is a difficult one because of the differences of language and culture and the employment situation.

In Nebraska, there are some 1,179 new Americans of Vietnamese background. Hopefully their lot at this holiday time is a happy one.

Many Nebraska communities, churches and individuals have worked hard to find homes and jobs for the refugees and they are to be commended.

Many of the Vietnamese, we are sure would rather be living in the country of their birth, observing their special days in their own way. But politics has prevented that from happening.

At this time of year which is of special significance to a great majority of Americans, we hope some thought and service can be extended to the refugees. There is much to be said for the argument that we owe something to these people who were supported by but also supportive of this nation during its unfortunate Vietnam involvement.

But more important, caring, hospitality and help are among the best traditions of America.

A Commendable Example

An Associated Press story carried in The Star earlier this week illustrated the escalating cost of energy.

Of greater importance, it illustrated that conservation works.

Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan, in the story about energy-saving at the State Capitol building, said he would "use" the press to make a point. We'll allow ourselves to be used.

Examples cited in the story:

— In 1972 the state used 58,403,400 pounds of steam at a cost of more than $70,000 while paying $1.20 for every 1,000 pounds. Projected 1975 figures show the state will use just 40,571,400 pounds at a cost of $79,256, at a rate of $2.60 per 1,000 pounds. The savings on steam comes to $72,000. If the conservation measures, which include shutting off the steam part of the year and turning down the thermostats, had not been initiated, the state's bill would have been $151,000 based on 1972 usage figures and 1975 rates.

— In 1972 the state spent $20,291 on airconditioning. This year the final cost was $27,963. Given 1972 usage rates, the state would have spent $70,964.

— In 1972 the state used more than 7.3 million kilowatt hours of electricity at a cost of $62,299. This year's projected cost is $93,884 for an estimated 6.4 million kilowatt hours. If usage had not been curtailed, the bill for this year would have been some $118,560.

MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — While Secretary Kissinger has escaped the threat of a contempt citation by the congress, his implacable enemies still pursue him determined to drive him out of office.

The opponents are a curious bag, some with sincere policy differences, others with deep personal grievances and many with a strong bias against a secretary of state who holds so much power in the public eye.

One of the most interesting is a man of great intelligence which is matched by the intensity of his conviction that Kissinger must go if the nation is to be saved. When Admiral Elmo Zumwalt retired as chief of naval operations, he began a new career of writing, lecturing with an eventual plunge into politics all aimed at the Kissinger policy.

This was much more than what his predecessor, Admiral Thomas Moorer, did and that was as an old sea dog to join up with Georgetown's center of Strategic Studies. No such calm center of study would suffice for Zumwalt, some of whose Navy associates call him a fanatic.

In testimony before a House committee recently, Zumwalt testified that Kissinger had covered up Soviet violations of the nuclear arms agreement and had deliberately kept them from President Ford. At his press conference just before taking off for Western Europe, Kissinger emphatically and even angrily denied these charges.

Because Zumwalt's distrust of Kissinger goes so much deeper than merely the accusation of a America's nuclear submarines at sea will be capable of destroying Russia's cities, but that in strategic terms will not matter since major defense and industrial operations will have been placed underground or removed to remote locations in Siberia.

What should the United States do gazing down into the abyss of ruin? Zumwalt has two answers. One is to refuse to sell surplus American grain to the hard-pressed Russians faced with the time, you give us an opportunity to make sure beyond any doubt that you are cutting back on arms spending.

Second we should stop enabling the Soviets to have access to our advanced military technology. Zumwalt believes that they are taking advantage of us by getting for free what has cost the U.S. billions in research to produce.

And it goes without saying that Zumwalt believes with virtually all his confreres who move out of high places in the Pentagon that this country must spend much more on defense, even though it means a lowering of our standard of living. In short we must emulate Sparta.

As for politics, Zumwalt is now testing the waters with the likelihood he will enter the race for the Senate in Virginia against Harry F. Byrd Jr. next year. He has important allies who believe not only in his ideas but in his future. One is Paul Nitze in whose office, while he was Secretary of the Navy, Zumwalt served. Nitze has already contributed to the limit for a potential Virginia campaign.

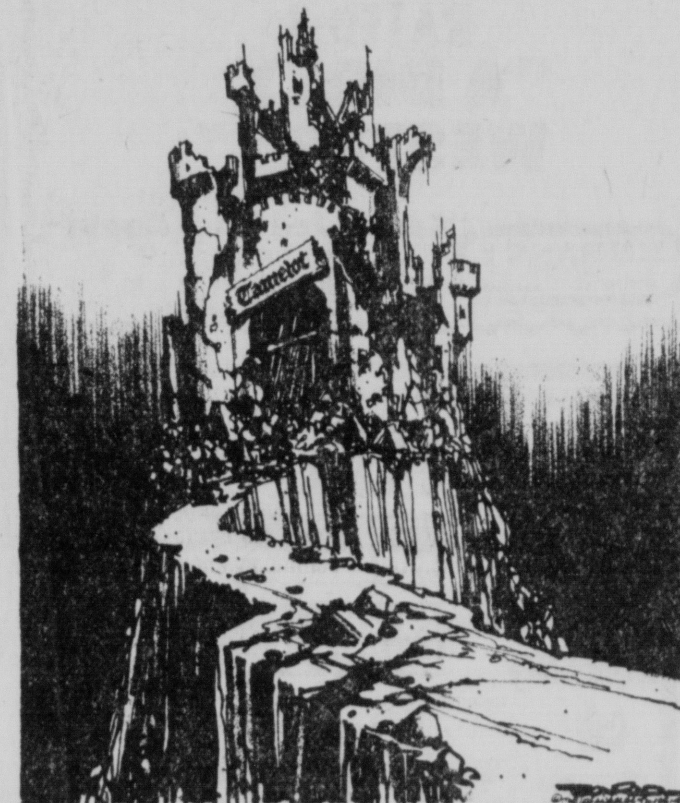

As I have said before, the matter of violation of nuclear agreements is so complex as to be beyond the reach of the layman. But I have talked with a high-ranking official who for many years was privy to the top-secret exchanges on nuclear disarmament. He believes it is impossible to conceal violations of the Soviet-U.S. agreement as Zumwalt charged.

I am inclined to accept this view. I reject the Zumwalt thesis that President Ford is Kissinger's captive. Part of this thesis is that the attacks will grow so intense that the President will have to drop his secretary of state before the Republican convention next summer.

This can happen, but in my opinion it would be a damaging blow to American foreign policy.

The Lancaster County Emergency Shop, which has served low income residents for 20 years, should continue its work of collecting and distributing clothing, blankets, household furniture and appliances, according to a report released Friday.

The shop, housed in the basement of the County Health and Welfare Building, 2200 St. Mary's, needs additional space, according to the report, prepared by a 12-member volunteer committee.

And the report suggests that the County Board should initiate a space study of the crowded building which houses the County Health Department, part of the county welfare functions and the emergency shop.

The shop, a part government, part non-profit private corporation function, gave almost $102,000 in clothing and other items to more than 12,500 low income people last year.

And although the report recommends a continuation of the services, it suggests that the administrative structure of the shop should be changed.

Currently the non-profit corporation is charged with the shop's administration, and with raising donated funds. The county supplements these funds. This year more than $21,000 of county money has been budgeted for the administrative expenses.

Under the report recommendations, the County Welfare Department would assume administrative control of the shop and the commissioners would appoint an advisory committee.

This committee would review operations and non-personnel policies, making recommendations to the welfare director and the commissioners, who would have ultimate control.

The Community Emergency Shop, Inc., the private corporation, would have input on the advisory committee and would continue to be responsible for soliciting private donations and providing the voluntary staff to the shop.

The study on the emergency shop began more than six months ago to deal with possible duplication of the shop work with other no-cost or low-cost operations in the community.

The commissioners will discuss the report at their Tuesday morning staff meeting and the afternoon regular board meeting.

Auto License Statements' Twin Figures Explained

Car and truck licensing tax statements have two tax figures this year. And those two figures have many owners baffled, according to County Treasurer Frank Golden, who has been trying to clear up the questions.

The first year for the staggered system of buying license plates is 1976.

But for the first year of the system there will be no staggering. Everyone will buy plates between Jan. 2 and Feb. 27.

The two prices indicate the license and tax cost, Golden explained. The lower figure is for those who buy plates in January and the higher figure for those who buy in February. February customers are essentially paying for 13 months of licensing, he said.

Next year car and truck owners must buy their plates the same month they bought it this year, unless they are one of the 30% to 35% who are expected to trade their current vehicle for a different one. Then they will buy plates the same month in 1977 that they traded in their car or truck in 1976.

For example, a person who buys his plates this coming February will buy license plates in February 1977.

But let's say a person buys plates in February and trades his car or truck for a different vehicle in July. Then he will pick up new plates in July 1977.

In about three years, because of trade-ins, licensing should be staggered throughout the year, rather than bunched up in January and February, Golden said.

Nebraskans will receive Bicentennial license plates this year instead of stickers so persons applying for plates by mail must add $1 to the total fees. This is twice the amount charged four years ago when license plates were last issued.

The increase is attributed to higher mailing and handling costs.

Both the Gateway and County-City Building motor vehicle offices will be open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday during the coming licensing season, Golden said.

2 Missing Children Found Dead; Mother, Boyfriend Under Arrest

NEW YORK (AP) — A young mother who said her two children vanished in a crowded toy department during a Christmas Eve shopping trip was arrested Friday night and charged with killing them, police said. The woman's boyfriend also was charged with murder.

The naked, burned bodies of 2-year-old Rodell Mackall and his 4-year-old half-sister, Candy Cunningham, were found Friday night amid the weeds and broken bottles of a vacant lot in East Harlem.

Police said the children probably were killed one or two days before their mother reported them missing. Flammable liquid had been poured over the bodies and ignited, police said.

The mother, Debra Mackall, 26, and her friend, Alfred Forte, 30, were brought in handcuffs to a police station in Queens, a borough of New York City.

Police said some of the children's clothing was found in Forte's apartment.

Mrs. Mackall, apparently had been married twice and had recently moved in with Forte, detectives said.

Mrs. Mackall and Forte went to a police station Wednesday night to report the children's disappearance. The mother said she had taken the children with her while she did some last-minute Christmas shopping at a department store in Queens, about 5 miles east of where the bodies were found.

She said she wanted to pick out some surprises for Candy and Rodell. She said she left them alone for about 10 minutes, but they were gone when she returned.

Edwin Dreher, the assistant police chief in charge of Queens detectives, said none of Mrs. Mackall's neighbors in the East Elmhurst section of Queens recalled seeing the children since Monday. Nor did anyone at the department store remember them, Dreher added.

"They were dead Christmas Eve," he told a news conference.

In response to questions, he said neighbors had reported instances of the mother abusing the children.

Dreher said Mrs. Mackall and Forte did not take polygraph — commonly known as lie detector — tests Friday, although they had agreed to do so. Pressed for details, he said, "We'd blow the case if we told you that."

Cause of death has not been determined, he said. Autopsies were ordered.

Parts Of Commitment Laws Nixed

Omaha (AP) — A three-judge federal panel has ordered that no one be committed to mental institutions in Omaha or Lincoln unless certain guidelines set forth by the panel are met.

Portions of Nebraska's present mental health commitment laws are unconstitutional because they "deny persons due process of law as guaranteed by the 14th Amendment," the judges said.

Ronald J. Palagi, attorney for one of three persons who challenged the laws' constitutionality in Federal District Court here, hailed the judges' decision Friday as "just super. We got almost everything we asked for."

Deputy Douglas County Atty. Henry Wendt, who represented some of the defendants in suit, said he would study the ruling and discuss it with the county's Board of Mental Health before commenting.

Pickup, Auto Collide, Putting Two In Hospital

Two Lancaster County residents were reported in good condition at St. Elizabeth's Community Health Center Friday night after a two-vehicle accident at Hwy 2 and 70th.

Daryl A. TeSelle, 20, of Fifth and Jerry Chemoneth, 16, of Roca were injured when their pickup collided with a car driven by Layne T. Nelson, 16, Lincoln, according to the Nebraska State Patrol. Nelson and six passengers in his car escaped injury, the patrol said.

An appeal of the decision by Circuit Judge Donald P. Lay and District Court Judges Robert V. Denney and Albert G. Schatz could be made directly to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The three plaintiffs, all committed by the mental health boards either in Douglas or Lancaster County, filed separate suits earlier this year which later were consolidated as class actions.

All three have been released, and the judges left open the question of what to do about those persons who have been

Early Morning Blaze Destroys Family's Home

An early morning fire left a Lancaster County family homeless Friday when their two-story farmhouse burned to the ground.

No one in the Deryl Watson family was home when the fire started. The parents were at work. An 11-year-old was with his grandparents and a 13-year-old was visiting a friend.

The fire was reported at about 7:25 a.m. by a motorist who saw smoke from a Hwy. 34, a mile south of the Watson home, which is near 136th and Holdrege. By the time firefighters with the Southeast Rural Fire District arrived, the entire home was in flames and part of the roof had fallen in. Although the house had been remodeled, most of it was around 100 years old, according to Fire Chief Joe Booth.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, Booth said.

Flooding Strikes State Of Washington Again

By The Associated Press

Flooding struck Washington state on Friday for the second time this month as a storm swept in from the Pacific. The third winter storm in six days hit New England, where snow turned to rain and caused minor flooding.

The National Weather Service in Seattle said a warm front which moved through Friday, with winds measured at up to 70 miles an hour, would be followed by another storm.

The Nooksack, Skagit, Snoqualmie, Stillaguamish and Satsop rivers were forecast to reach flood stage.

Thomas Pryor, State Department of Emergency Services Director, said conditions were not as bad as during flooding in early December. But a spokesman said the state was concerned the new high water would occur in areas that haven't yet recovered from the earlier floods.

Trees were toppled in the Tacoma area by winds clocked at over 50 m.p.h. Part of the roof of a store was blown off.

Drivers on two floating bridges crossing Lake Washington east of Seattle were warned to use "extreme caution" because of waves lapping over the spans.

Over 4 inches of rain fell during the 24-hour period ending Friday morning at Quillayute. Rainfall of 3.83 inches was reported during the same period at Gorst, south of Bremerton where 3 inches fell.

Rain, sleet and freezing rain pelted southern New England on Friday, with snow changing to rain in the north.

Highway travel around Boston was slowed by icy surfaces in the morning, and by high water in the afternoon as temperatures rose.

Travel on Boston's four electrified rapid transit lines was slowed by icy wires and rails early in the day. The system was later shut down for an hour as snowmelt flooded a room at a power station.

Swiftly rising temperatures turned snow to rain across much of Maine on Friday and the National Weather Service said the Portland area received the equivalent of two inches of rain by late afternoon.

Commuter traffic in Portland, Maine, was stalled by water as sewers and catch basins became clogged by ice.

"It's brutal," said Lt. Dan Quirk of the Portland police. "I've never seen it this bad."

"We're tied up all over the city, and every street is flooded," he said. Quirk said some of the streets had up to 2 1/2 feet of water, and scores of cars were abandoned because of ignition flooding.

Portland International Jetport was closed for most of the day, and a spokesman said passengers were bused to Boston.

A storm in the Midwest dumped six to eight inches of snow on the central and southern areas of Illinois on Friday, giving holiday travelers snow-packed roads with heavy drifting in some areas. There were few reports of serious injury.

Motorists were forced to drive 30 m.p.h. and even slower on interstate highways.

State police at Effingham, where some entrance and exit ramps along Interstates 70 and 57 were blocked temporarily, said the number of cars and trucks stuck along the road was "too numerous to mention."

Only one lane was open in each direction on Interstate 57, and Illinois authorities reported wind-blown snow packed three inches deep on Interstate 74 between Urbana and Danville.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Second Psalm and Acts 4:25

This question is the opening words of the Second Psalm of The Bible. God Almighty's Revelation of Himself to man. The Psalm tells who the heathen are, why they rage, and the results of this rage, which is a pretty good blue-print of the conditions of the world today. God also tells us the way out, and gives and urges upon us the acceptance of His invitation to come out of adversity, vexation, and confusion into peace and blessedness. However, it appears that we prefer to continue to rage! Some one wrote us and said they had a friend who said if some one did not tell him "what in the hell" this column was raving about he was "going crazy." We replied that we hoped the friend had not as yet gone crazy, but please tell him the object of our raving was to keep him and others "out of hell" rather than "in hell!"

We quote from another letter received from one who does a splendid job of "sitting in the seat of the scornful", witness: "The Holy Bible which you call The Word of God is one of the most obscene books published and it is surprising someone hasn't used its pornography commercially. The entire history of the Christian religion is one of violence, crime, and sin." If this party as a result of the teaching perhaps of a godly mother, or father, or friends, joined some Protestant Christian Church in years gone by, we certainly hope he has had the honesty and sincerity to resign and get out and ask that his name be taken off the Church roll! We wish to comment on this since we believe that this is not a rare and isolated case but is shared by great numbers today, even by many who remain in the Church to share in its benefits and influence, and especially by some who have attained to high and leading positions in the ecclesiastical world. For example, in recent years a Bishop who was honored by one of the largest Protestant denominations by being promoted to the highest office his Church could give wrote that The God of The Old Testament was a "dirty bully." And another who was advanced to the top position of his great Protestant denomination likened God to Hitler. Of course these men were generally approved and supported by the majority of the preachers and Church authorities under them or they would never have reached such high positions.

Dante, in his trip through the infernal regions tells of seeing a man in hell whom he knew to be still alive on earth. Asking for an explanation the "shade" told him that he got to be so "low down" while on the earth that his soul was carried down to hell even before his death, and a demon took possession of his body, and animates it on earth until its time ran its course — a demon had taken its place in the body that walks and sleeps, and drinks, and puts on clothes! If after taking the solemn vows of The Protestant Christian Church, and especially those of one of its officials, and then instead of resigning and getting out I remained in my position, accepting a good salary, and used it to corrupt and destroy and fight the doctrines of its Confession of Faith, I fear I would have fallen so low that I deserved the punishment of the man that the Poet saw in hell!

But as said above, the object of this column is to keep out of hell oneself, and every other one by the grace of God we possibly can. So, in God's Name we call on all who "sit in the seat of the scornful" to repent, and bring forth fruit meet for repentance, or else resign and get out of the Church. You will be safer and better off for "Whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder." These are the words of the Gentle Jesus" in Matthew 21:44, and in Luke 20:18. It don't pay to rage against The Almighty!

We replied to the "sitter in the seat of the scornful" quoted above that our reaction to his views concerning God's Book The Bible, might be illustrated as follows. Suppose here is a man who finds a nest of polecats under his home. In cleaning them out he is defiled with their awful odor, and for a time if folks did not see him but only smell him they would think he was a polecat. But he is not one, but on the contrary deserves to be honored for suffering a while in order to make his home and the abode of his family and loved ones decent and free from the horrible stench. The unpleasant things in The Bible the "sitters in the seat of the scornful" mock at, appear in order to reveal to all men that the natural man in the eyes of the "Holy Holy Holy, Lord God Almighty" are as "spiritual polecats" — read Psalm 14:3 noting the margin translation for "filthy"; also Romans 1:21-32 — and the only way to get clean from our vileness and avoid being cast into the fires of eternal hell, is by being washed in the atoning blood of The Lord Jesus Christ, shed on Calvary the blood of the one Clean and Perfect Man The Second Adam.

"There is a fountain filled with blood, drawn from Immanuel's veins, and sinners plunged beneath that flood lose all their guilty stains." This is the Gospel of The Grace of God in Christ Jesus. Don't reject it! "In Christ's stead, I beseech you, be ye reconciled to God."

Tornadoes Voted Top News Story

By The Associated Press
The May 6 tornadoes which devastated large areas of Omaha and Magnet and caused considerable damage in several other communities were voted 1975's top news story in Nebraska.

Votes were cast by Associated Press newspaper and broadcast members and by AP staff writers.

The Omaha twister killed three persons, injured more than 100 and did an estimated $125 million damage to thousands of homes and businesses. Some officials called it the most damaging tornado ever recorded. As the year ends, numerous buildings still bear the storm's scars.

The same day, a twister struck Magnet in northeast Nebraska, nearly leveling the 88-person community. Weather Service officials said that tornado packed even more power than Omaha's. Other twisters were reported at Pierce, Nehawka, Plattsmouth, Fremont, Stanton, Osmound, Winside, Colon and Randolph.

The Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing in January by American Beef Packers, Inc., of Omaha and its Council Bluffs, Iowa, subsidiary, Beefland International, Inc., was the state's number two story.

The bankruptcy left Midwest livestock raisers unpaid for an estimated $20 million worth of livestock and led to charges against ABP founder and President Frank R. West by the federal government and the states of Iowa and South Dakota. Other top officials and the firms themselves also were charged. A federal trial was held in Omaha, but no verdicts have yet been reached. Legal maneuvers continue in South Dakota and are pending in Iowa.

A Jan. 10 blizzard paralyzed much of eastern Nebraska for several days and caused numerous livestock deaths. Another storm struck the Nebraska Panhandle in March and central and northeastern Nebraska were hit hard in November. The blizzards were rated the number three story of the year.

On Oct. 18, six members of the Henry Kelle family were slain in Sutherland. A next-door neighbor, Erwin Charles Simants, 29, was arrested and charged with their murders the next day. Within a few days, a Lincoln County judge issued a "gag" order barring the news media from publishing certain information in the case. That order subsequently was altered by a district court judge, a U.S. Supreme Court justice and the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The "gag" order embroiled the nation's news media in a fight over First Amendment rights to a free press and free speech. The murders and subsequent court actions were voted the number four story of the year.

The first session of the 84th Legislature saw senators act on many key issues including penal reform, water use legislation and that old standby — the dove hunting bill.

But spending, along with economic conditions in general, prompted Gov. J.J. Exon to call a special legislative session. Senators enacted budget cuts at Exon's request, but even that did not prevent an income tax hike. The legislative sessions were voted the number five story of the year.

Nebraska politics began taking on a new look in 1975 when Republican Rep. Dave Martin stepped down after 14 years in Congress. But that was just the beginning.

Roman Hruska, a senator since 1954, announced that he wouldn't seek re-election in 1976 and supported Republican Rep. John Y. McCollister. After Exon decided not to seek a Senate seat in 1976, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky switched from Republican to Democrat and announced he would seek the party nomination also sought by former State Democratic Chairman Hess Dyas. The changing political scene was voted the state's number six story.

In June, the U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a federal district court decision and ordered the Omaha School District to achieve full integration beginning with the 1976-77 school year.

In an appeal, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the Circuit Court and raised the likelihood of massive busing next fall. The story placed seventh.

The Nebraska Cornhuskers downed Florida 13-10 in the Dec. 31, 1974, Sugar Bowl and then entered what was to be a "rebuilding" year. They finished the 1975 season with only one loss (to arch-rival Oklahoma) and a tie for the Big 8 crown. After considerable controversy over bowl matchups, the Huskers played Arizona State in the Fiesta Bowl Dec. 26. The Husker saga tied for eighth.

Crash Kills Arcadian

Scotia (AP) — Dennis E. Zauha, 18, of Arcadia, was killed in a one-car crash early Friday on Hwy. 22 one-fourth mile west of here, police said.

The Nebraska State Patrol said Zauha was alone in the car when it struck a bridge.

The death was the first recorded in Nebraska during the Christmas holiday period.

It boosts the 1975 highway death toll to 369, compared to 387 on this date last year.

Car Crushes North Dakotan

Mercer, N.D. (UPI) — An elderly Mercer, N.D., man died Christmas day from head injuries following a freak mishap.

Authorities said Christ Heim, 71, was working on a car in his garage when the car slipped off a jack and fell on him.

A neighbor found Heim's body after he failed to return home for supper, according to McLean County Sheriff Arlen Thompson.

Omaha Fire Injures Four, One Critically

Omaha (AP) — Fire officials say a Humboldt woman was critically injured in a pre-dawn fire on the city's south side Friday. Three other persons were also injured.

Fire officials identified the woman as Mary Spalding, 79, who apparently was visiting her daughter's family here.

Treated and released for minor burns were the daughter, Audrey Enholm, and her son, David Enholm. Mrs. Enholm's husband, Ted, 49, was reported in fair condition at an Omaha hospital.

A Fire Dept. spokesman said Mrs. Spalding was found in the living room of the Enholm residence, where it is believed the fire started.

The spokesman said the others escaped through a window.

An investigation continues into the cause of the fire.

Nebraskan Dies In S.D. Crash

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Authorities say Michael Lee Maser, 23, Alliance, Neb., was killed near here shortly before noon Friday when the car he was riding in went over an embankment and landed in Rapid Creek.

Authorities say the car driven by Douglas Worth, 18, also of Alliance, went off a road south of Rapid City and landed upside down in the creek. Worth and three other passengers were hospitalized at Rapid City.

Also in the car were Jim Wilcox, Ellsworth, Neb.; Kathy Powers, Lincoln, Neb.; and Bradley Green, 16, Alliance.

Exon On Top Of Political News During 1975

Gov. J. James Exon continued to do in 1975 what he has been able to do most of his political life: capture the headlines and, according to the polls, the support of the people.

The conservative Democrat was in the political spotlight for most of 1975 with supporters hoping, and detractors wondering, if he would seek the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate in 1976.

Speculation grew as U.S. Sen.

Roman Hruska, after some 22 years in the upper house, announced he would not seek reelection.

But Exon decided not to seek the nomination that would surely have been his. Even in doing that, he captured headlines: Exon made his announcement while calling a special session of the legislature. In doing so, he defused the arguments of critics who said he was calling the special session so he could use it as a platform for 1976 political support.

McCollister decided to seek Hruska's old job. His bid is challenged by colorful, former State Sen. Richard Proud of Omaha. Proud's contention has been that McCollister's candidacy is blessed — and dominated — by the GOP establishment.

Republicans and Democrats had their intra-party politics through the year. Party officials understandably said there was no real problem — just a matter of some opinions differing.

On the Republican side, the Political Leadership Action Group wrote to GOP state chairman Anne Batchelder and questioned whether the party in Nebraska must "fail completely before new voices and ideas are heard."

Charles Thone in 1974, has emerged as a vocal Democratic hopeful. Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, who was rumored to be an attractive candidate in the eyes of Exon, switched his party affiliation from GOP to Democratic and simultaneously announced he would seek his new party's Senate bid.

There are key questions in the 2nd and 3rd congressional districts to be answered in 1976.

If Cavanaugh is nominated by the Democrats, he could face P.J. Morgan, a young and well-known Douglas County Commissioner and former state senator, or Monte Taylor, a member of the city council.

Cavanaugh and Morgan have both been noted for their "go get 'em" style of politics, and if a race between them developed, observers feel it could be a political contest worth noting — for style as well as issues.

Rep. Virginia Smith is the question mark in the third district.

Her election was hard-fought, and GOP voters may be concerned about whether she could defeat a Democrat in the general election.

She appears surely destined for a primary election challenge that could involve several candidates.

Zech Released From Hospital

Douglas — David Zech, critically injured Aug. 25 when he fell through a tenth floor window of Abel Hall at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has been dismissed from Immanuel Hospital in Omaha. Zech, who was in critical condition in a Lincoln hospital for several weeks before being transferred to Omaha, spent the holidays here with his parents. Although he must wear a neck brace a while longer, he is completely recovered. He still does not remember how the accident happened.

Mid-Plains Hosts Nursing Series

North Platte — One in a series of programs on quality in nursing will be held Jan. 21 at Mid-Plains Technical Community College.

Officials Join National Association

Omaha — Three officials of the Nebraska Association of Mutual Insurance Agents have been appointed to positions on committees of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents, the state group said. William Mountford of Red Cloud, president of the Nebraska association, has been appointed to serve on the national five-man committee for federal legislation. Neal Miesbach of Omaha, will serve on the committee for state legislation and regulation. Dean Pierson of Wayne will serve on the consumer relations committee.

Youth Killed In Hunting Accident

Weeping Water — David A. Minium, 15, of Weeping Water, was killed in a hunting accident near here Thursday, according to the Cass County sheriff's office. The victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Minium. He was hunting with a cousin east of town when he apparently dropped his .22 rifle and it discharged, authorities said. The sheriff's office was notified about 2 p.m. and a rescue unit took Minium to a Syracuse hospital where he died shortly after his arrival.

Hruska's decision came as no surprise. There were strong indications from within the GOP that Hruska was being urged to step down, lest he be defeated in the general election — or even the primary. Hruska's staff vehemently denied that he was being pushed into retirement.

Much of 1975's political activity was understandably geared to the coming year's elections.

Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh announced he would seek the U.S. House seat in the 2nd District. Cavanaugh, a 30-year-old Democratic attorney with a reputation for talent and occasional temper, is seen as a real threat to the chair previously held by GOP Rep. John Y. McCollister.

That led to a sort of summit conference in which many of those concerned about the party's future in Nebraska were asked to come up with recommendations for improving its prospects.

The Democrats seemed concerned most about whether Exon would run for the Senate. And when he decided not to, their concern turned to who would.

Tornadoes Voted Top News Story

By The Associated Press
The May 6 tornadoes which devastated large areas of Omaha and Magnet and caused considerable damage in several other communities were voted 1975's top news story in Nebraska.

Votes were cast by Associated Press newspaper and broadcast members and by AP staff writers.

The Omaha twister killed three persons, injured more than 100 and did an estimated $125 million damage to thousands of

The settlement of refugee Vietnamese doctors in Nebraska following South Vietnam's fall to the Communists won the other half of eighth place.

State Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh led the state's successful effort to attract refugee physicians to doctor-short rural Nebraska.

A long, dry summer hurt Nebraska wheat farmers, but the state still recorded a crop of 98.24 million bushels, 13% below the 1958 record. Farmers saw the average per bushel price of their wheat drop to $3.30, 51 cents below 1974's average.

State agriculture officials forecast a record irrigated corn crop in 1975. The total corn crop was estimated at 508.95 million bushels, up 34% from last year's drought-stricken crop. Of the total, the irrigated crop was forecast at 368.55 million bushels, 17% above last year and 16% above the 1973 record.

Oat production was up 11% from last year, while barley was up 33% and the rye harvest was generally unchanged from 1974. The crop was rated tenth.

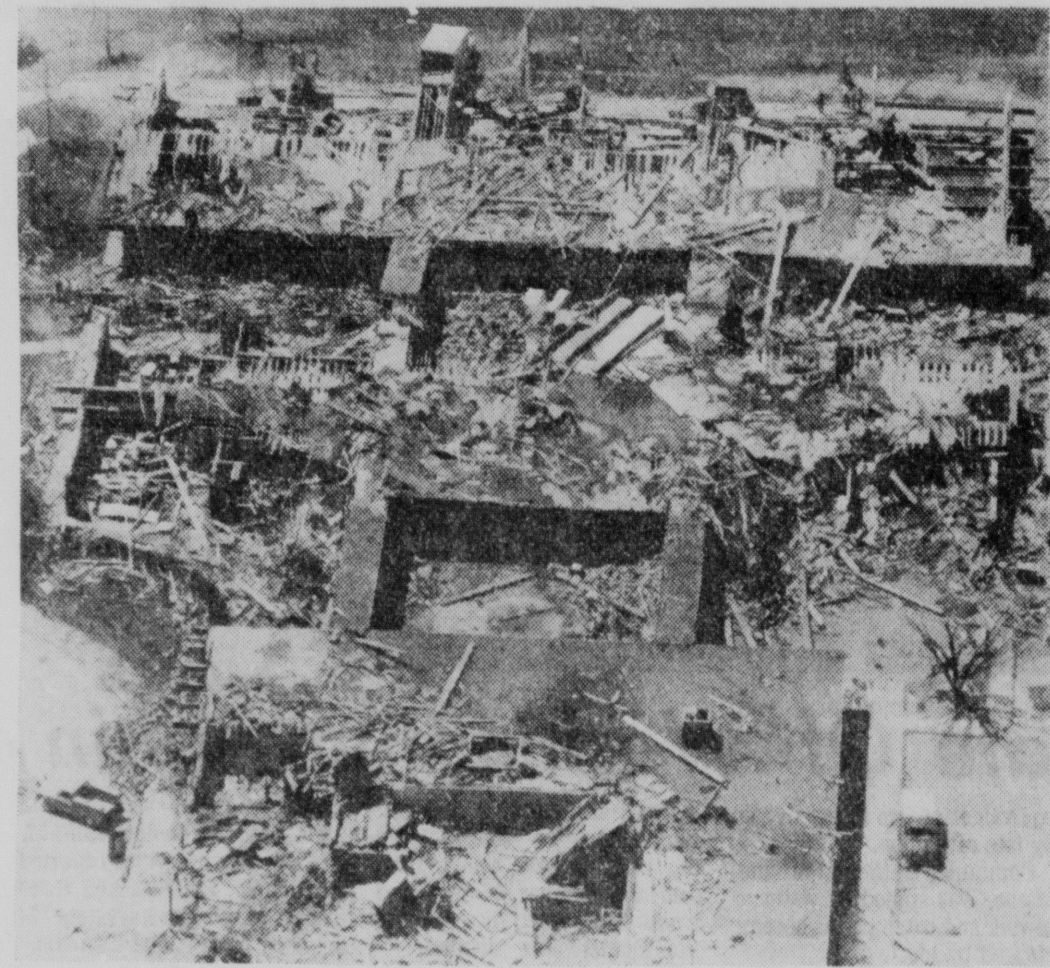

Sixteen other stories received votes, including the voters' decision to end the Mid-State Reclamation Project, election challenges in the 3rd Congressional District and in the legislative contest involving former State Sen. Terry Carpenter, and the controversial settlement in the Beatrice State Home suit.

Other vote-getters included the establishment of Omaha's Big Green lottery and lottery proposals in Niobrara and Terrytown, Sen. Loran Schmit's meat price-fixing suits, President Ford's visit at the White House Conference on Economics in Omaha and the USDA's efforts to impose new beef grading standards.

The problems with nuclear plants, environmentalists' suits and rising costs of public power, higher livestock prices, the imposition of the death sentence in two cases, the closing of John F. Kennedy College at Wahoo and the resignation of Episcopal Bishop Robert Varley after his disclosures about the use of drugs and alcohol also were mentioned.

Other votes went to the continuing story of bankruptcy actions involving shopping centers and apartment complexes, the first high school football playoffs, Sen. Ernest Chambers' allegations about police actions in Lincoln and Omaha and a deadly disease experienced by the rare whooping cranes at the Sacramento Game Management area near Wilcox.

Chicano Education Needs Work

By The Associated Press

A rough draft of a survey that may be released by Jan. 7 says Mexican-American students are not "receiving the kind of education they deserve" in Nebraska schools.

The survey by the state's Mexican-American Commission has been completed. It was being redrafted and edited Christmas week.

Some of the conclusions drawn from the survey—also subject to some revision—were made available to The Associated Press.

Actually, the commission did two surveys in 1975: one centered on gathering information about the education of the Mexican-American in Nebraska and his education. The other sought information from the students.

The survey concluded in part that the research has "brought to our attention one basic fact—the need for a much-improved educational system concerning the Mexican American students in Nebraska."

The report says survey material "has shown that there is a definite drop-out problem in the schools in Nebraska where the Mexican-American student is concerned, and this one factor is proof that the educational system in Nebraska needs an overhaul in all areas, so that all children in Nebraska may receive an excellent education."

"This report is not trying to say that Nebraska is intentionally preventing Mexican-American students from receiving the kind of education they deserve," the conclusion states. "We are saying, however, whether it is intentional or not, the Mexican-American students are not receiving a good education . . ."

The final survey report is expected to include suggestions from Mexican-American students attending public schools, and specific figures where possible on dropout rates among Mexican American students.

The report notes the largest concentrations of Mexican-American students are found in Douglas, Lincoln, Lancaster, Hall and Scottsbluff counties.

The survey summary indicates students recommended recruitment of Mexican-American teachers and counselors, work programs and classes on Mexican-American culture and heritage.

Legislators To Be Mum On 'Gag Rules'—Luedtke

The Legislature will remain silent on the use of "gag rules" to suppress news coverage of pretrial action in Nebraska criminal cases, predicted Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke, chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Luedtke said that any discussion of the use of gag rules in the coming session would be untimely.

The gag rule in the case of Erwin Charles Simants has taken on national implications with the U.S. Supreme Court determining the Nebraska case.

Should the high court law down clear procedural ground rules limiting or expanding a judge's power to use restraining orders against the press, Luedtke said the Legislature might include those rules in state law.

"Even if we passed a law, the court could overrule us by setting their own rules," Luedtke said.

The question is really a constitutional one, Luedtke said. It has been long established that preliminary hearings are not a trial, to be open, as in the case of the actual jury trial, he said.

"The main concern is for the rights of the individual, more at the pretrial stage than the trial stage," Luedtke said.

The judicial council, a group of lawyers and judges, has been studying the entire question of criminal procedures, Luedtke said.

The utilization of gag orders is also being "carefully monitored and studied by the committee," Luedtke said. He predicted some legislative action on the matter in the 1977 session, when the entire question of criminal and civil procedures is addressed by the committee.

The sentiment in the Judiciary Committee is to lower its profile in the upcoming session, Luedtke said. The committee has been criticized by some legislators as being overactive in recent years.

In the 1976 session, the committee will be concentrating on pushing the recodification of the criminal code, Luedtke said.

The criminal code will focus on the classification of various crimes and the sentencing process, Luedtke said, and not questions of procedure, such as gag orders.

Luedtke said areas likely to spark debate in the coming session are:

Raising the dollar value from $50 for felony violations, imposition of mandatory sentences with no probation for some offenses; separate penalties for commission of a crime with a weapon; abortion; drug law; abolition of capital punishment.

State GOP Recruiting Locally

The Nebraska Republican Party has launched a candidate recruitment program, according to an article in the GOP December newsletter.

The program centers on a new manual "which will be used as a guide to development recruitment committees to find local level candidates," the newsletter reported.

The newsletter said, "Erosion of Republican office holders at the county level has been increasing, and to hold our position as the majority party in Nebraska, this erosion has to be halted. The year to reverse the trend is 1976."

The manual has been distributed to county chairmen and can be used in "seeking candidates for the State Legislature or other district level offices," the article said.

The manual includes a list of all county level partisan offices to be elected in 1976, with the name and party affiliation of the present office holder.

The newsletter concludes: "Where Republican incumbents are up for re-election, the party is urging the county chairmen to make early contact with the officeholders to determine if they intend to stand for re-election. Where incumbent Republicans are declining to run for re-election, the county committee needs to find a strong candidate as early as possible."

"It goes without saying that where Democrats hold these offices, we must have a Republican candidate if we are to have any hope of regaining that office."

Violence Problem Could Worsen

Omaha (AP) — Discipline in Midlands schools is better than in other parts of the nation, but some problems exist and they could get worse, if schools aren't alert, according to a Nebraska Department of Education official.

Robert Hudson, administrator of student personnel services for the state, commented on a report on school violence by two Johns Hopkins University sociologists.

While Nebraska schools probably will not let violence get out of hand, some of the same frustrations and bad feelings which lead to violence exist.

Discipline is generally less of a problem because students have a "sense of community" with teachers, parents and towns, he said.

Yet, the size of the school is not a guarantee of peace, Hudson said. Some large schools have the same sense of cooperation and responsibility.

Omaha Central High School Principal Gaylord Moller said several years ago racial tension and demonstrations led to "quite a bit of violence between students."

The result was that Central made some changes, expanding the student council into a larger assembly with more minority representation, adding classes in minority studies and other subjects; providing more outlets for minority leadership and recognition.

The changes were important to all students, Moller said, because members of all races saw what they thought were injustices remedied.

"I'm very honest with the student assembly," he said. "It has to realize it is a representative body, not a government. Its purpose is purely to influence the administration and teachers."

Moller said some of the measures suggested in the study on violence, such as changing the grading system and concentrating more on minor problems like truancy to head off more serious problems are "beautiful thoughts."

According to Hudson, traditional grading can lead to frustration and branding students as "losers." But pressures on secondary schools make it difficult to change, he said.

Stockmen Disappointed In Ruling On Feedlots

An official of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association says the Nebraska Supreme Court's ruling that livestock operations which are judged to be a nuisance can be halted by court orders is "disappointing."

A five-judge majority ruled Wednesday that livestock operations in rural areas, if not properly supervised to keep down odors and insects, can be halted by court order and their operators made liable for damages.

Paul Johnston of Schuyler, executive secretary of the state Livestock Feeders Association, said the case which brought the landmark ruling is "nothing but a neighborhood feud."

"It is disappointing that a Nebraska Supreme Court would react in this way since the Nebraska Environmental Control Department has given its okay to the feedlot," Johnston said.

"At this stage of the game, we don't have any feasible method of controlling odors at certain times of the year. The Environmental Control Department has

Lincoln County Board To Decide On Date For Its Recall Election

North Platte (UPI) — Lincoln County Clerk Virgil Burke said Friday it is up to the county commissioners to set a date for a special election on whether they should be recalled.

The Lincoln County District Court late Wednesday declared valid petitions turned over to county officials by a group of area residents seeking a recall election.

The residents were dissatisfied with commissioner zoning decisions.

That court decision ended a five-month controversy surrounding validity of the petitions.

Burke said the commissioners — Jerold Calhoun of North Platte, Leo Gutherless of

Blank Says He Won't Run For Congress Seat

Scottsbluff (AP) — Don Blank, a third district Congressional candidate in 1974, said Friday he would not seek the Republican nomination in 1976.

The McCook dentist said he would support incumbent Rep. Virginia Smith of Chappell, who defeated him in a 1974 primary by 141 votes.

Although Blank said some third district Republicans had urged him to become a contender, he said he conducted a survey which indicated it would be difficult and expensive for him to win the nomination.

Blank did not rule out a possible future candidacy.

DILIGENT SEARCH

We all know the shock of losing something we value. A misplaced book or valuable papers — even a treasured heirloom — gone astray can frustrate us for hours or even days. Diligent search often ends the mystery, but the memory of our exasperation lingers.

Yet while the loss of something material is easily grasped, many of us never realize that we may be missing important intangibles . . . like the secret of a richer, more satisfying life.

This search needn't take long, though. Millions find the faith that fulfills — every Sunday in church.

So can you.

vironmental Control Department has no regulations pertaining to it," Johnston said.

The high court ruling involved a suit brought by Glenn and Eoloo Botsch against the Leigh Land Co. The Botsch family farmstead was across the road from the Leigh feeding operation, which was capable of feeding as many as 3,700 head of cattle.

The court said the record clearly established that the feeding activities "as operated constituted a nuisance."

Johnston said the case set a precedent "that could be extremely detrimental to the livestock industry."

He said the ruling might be appealed.

Blank Says He Won't Run For Congress Seat

Scottsbluff (AP) — Don Blank, a third district Congressional candidate in 1974, said Friday he would not seek the Republican nomination in 1976.

The McCook dentist said he would support incumbent Rep. Virginia Smith of Chappell, who defeated him in a 1974 primary by 141 votes.

Blank did not rule out a possible future candidacy.

—Staying Ahead—

Second Mortgage Popular, Expensive

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — An increasingly popular way for people to raise money is by taking out a second mortgage. Inflation has added substantially to the value of their homes, giving them that much more borrowing power.

Second mortgages can help pay for college, finance a new addition to the house, cover a big medical bill, or give you some money to invest in your own business. Typically, when people take out second mortgages, they throw in a little extra to pay off current bills, says William Turley of the Commercial Credit Corp. in Baltimore.

What makes a second mortgage so attractive is that it's longer-term financing. You could stretch the price of a major home improvement out for perhaps 10 years, as opposed to the three-to-five years possible with a home-improvement loan. That means your monthly payments will be much lower.

But here's the rub. The total amount of interest you'll pay will be much higher than if you took out a loan for a shorter period. For example, assume you need $5,000 to add two rooms to your house. If you took out a home-improvement loan at 16% for five years, your average monthly payment would be around $120; over the term of the loan, you'd pay a total of $2,215 in interest.

More Than Twice
On the other hand, if you took out a 16% second mortgage for 10 years, your monthly payment would be $82. But over 10 years,

Jane Bryant Quinn

you would pay $4,862 in interest — more than twice as much as you'd owe on the five-year loan. Even if the five-year loan carried an interest rate of 18%, your total interest charge would be about half that of a 10-year loan.

Second mortgages are useful for big expenditures whose benefits are long-term in character. But in general they should be avoided for short-term items, like a vacation. When considering a second mortgage, ask yourself: Do I want this badly enough to still be paying for it 10 years from now? Is it worth the extra money I'll pay in interest?

If the answer is yes, then investigate sources of financing. Second mortgages cost a lot more than "firsts," but the rate does vary from lender to lender. A mortgage company might charge in the area of 14%, and a finance company, up to 16%.

You might get a better deal from a bank or S&L, although only a few of them write second mortgages at all. The term is generally five to 10 years, and the amount available usually runs to $10,000, although in some cases you can get more.

Each state has its own laws controlling the specifics of a second mortgage.

Other Ways

Some states keep the interest-rate ceiling on second mortgages so low, or so sharply limit the amount of the loan, that "seconds" are generally not offered. Other quirks in the law might also keep lenders out of the business. However, there are other ways to borrow against your house.

Some banks offer "open ended" mortgages, which allow you to come back and borrow more once you've paid off part of the principal. Or the bank might give you a new mortgage for a larger amount. You have to give up your old, lower-rate mortgage, but at least you get the extra money you need. Refinancing commits you to a big increase in interest payments over the life of the loan (usually 25 to 30 years), so think it over carefully before you do it.

Many banks and S&Ls write clauses into their mortgages prohibiting "seconds" without their permission. But in most cases this shouldn't be a stumbling block to your getting a loan, says Gerald Ellsworth of Advance Mortgage Co. When you sign up for a second mortgage, you have a three-day period in which to change your mind and tear up the contract.

There are usually no prepayment penalties on a "second," except those associated with the Rule of 78s. This refers to a method for calculating interest, and has the effect of raising the interest rate slightly if you prepay. The fees and charges for a second mortgage run around $75 to $100.

Stock Market Puts Together Another Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, responding to signs that interest rates might be headed lower, put together its third advance in a row Friday.

Trading slowed to its lightest total in more than three months, with many investors taking an extended Christmas holiday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 7.87 to 859.81, extending its gain for the week to 15.43 points.

With its steady rise over the past three weeks, the Dow has now moved to exactly 22 points below its closing high this year, reached on July 15.

Advancing issues outpaced declines 1,057 to 327 among the 1,789 traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume reached only 10 to 20 million shares, down from 11.5 million in Wednesday's four-hour session and the smallest total since 8.67 million changed hands Sept. 15 on the Jewish holiday Yom Kippur. Although the trade moved slowly throughout the day, analysts noted a steady flow of large block trades, which suggested that investing institutions were accumulating some stock after holding back earlier in the month to wait out year-end tax selling.

Brokers noted a pair of developments contributing to optimism about the interest rate outlook. One was a further rally in prices in the bond market, which has the effect of pushing down yields on the interest-bearing investments that compete with stocks for investors' funds.

'76 Farm Outlook Said Good

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The nation's agricultural economy improved considerably in the second half of 1975 and the outlook for next year appears to be good, according to an analysis in the December Monthly Review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City.

"Given the turnaround in the economy and the prospects for continued growth in 1976, domestic demand for agricultural commodities should strengthen in the year ahead," said the analysis by C. Edward Harshbarger, an economist with the Kansas City bank.

He said the favorable prospects for next year depend on good weather for crop production, favorable profit margins for livestock feeders, strong foreign demand and continued growth in the economy.

While demand is expected to be good next year, Harshbarger said, large supplies are expected to put some downward pressure on prices, particularly during the second half when livestock production is expected to expand more rapidly.

Harshbarger said gross farm income was likely to be up somewhat in 1976 but continued increases in production costs might leave net income a little below the $25 billion forecast for this year.

"The brighter agricultural picture that has developed in the last several months reflects various adjustments in farm output and improvements in the general economy," Harshbarger wrote.

"In the crop sector, for example, greatly improved growing and harvesting conditions pushed production sharply above 1974 levels when yields were plagued by spring floods, a summer drought and early frosts."

"Livestock producers have also made significant adjustments in output," he wrote. "During the first nine months of 1975, for example, total red meat production was about three per cent less than in the comparable year-earlier period. However, virtually all of the drop in output occurred in the hog industry as beef supplies exceeded 1974 levels by three per cent."

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Fire destroyed a major office complex in downtown Istanbul Friday. No injuries were reported.

Fire department officials said the fire grew from a short circuit in a nearby building.

The compound houses around 2,000 offices, mainly liaison points for Turkey's major industrial concerns.

Supersonic Air Service Inaugurated

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union inaugurated the world's first supersonic airline service Friday, a day behind schedule but 26 days ahead of the Anglo-French Concorde.

A supersonic Tupolev 144 jetliner of the Soviet national airline Aeroflot began twice-weekly, non-passenger flights between Moscow and Alma Ata, capital of the Kazakh Republic.

Flying at 1,366 miles an hour, the plane covered the 1,900 miles between the two cities in one hour and 58 minutes, less than half the four hours normally taken by subsonic Illyushin 62 aircraft.

Airport officials at Alma Ata gave flowers to pilots Vladimir Popov and Ivan Vedernikov in celebrations at the end of the inaugural flight.

No Passengers Yet
Soviet reporters went on the flight, but officials said the Tupolev would carry only cargo and mail over remote areas until mid-1976 because of "some unresolved questions" about the aircraft.

The flight came 26 days before Air France and British Airways planned to begin Concorde passenger service from Paris to Rio de Janeiro and London to the Persian Gulf state of Bahrain.

The official Tass news agency said Soviet scientists would study the impact of the Tupolev on the environment during the plane's first regular flights.

U.S. Transportation Secretary William Coleman is considering demands for barring supersonic planes from landing in the United States because of possible environmental problems.

Flight Delayed 1 Day
The Soviet Union had announced plans to inaugurate the supersonic service Thursday, but postponed the flight for 24 hours because of snow and high winds at Alma Ata.

The plane, designed by Andrei and Alexei Tupolev, is an improved version of a prototype aircraft that crashed at the 1973 Paris air show, killing 14 persons.

Cattle Market Goes Untested

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — With only 75 head on offer, cattle went untested on the Omaha Livestock Market Friday.

The USDA market offices were closed, but the Livestock Foundation of Omaha said the butcher top on the hog market Friday was $51.25.

There were 3,000 hogs on offer. Barrows and gilts were 25 cents to $1.00 higher, while sows sold steady to 50 cents lower. An offering of 200-310 pound hogs brought $43.00-51.00. Sows weighing 350-600 pounds sold for $38.50-39.50.

No sheep were offered.

Omaha
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Livestock Foundation of Omaha reported the Friday Omaha livestock quotations Friday. High 2,800 barrows and gilts, 25 to 100 higher, sows steady. Live butchering 200-310 lb. hogs 40 to 50 cents lower. Cattle and calves 75 on offer, market untested.

Sheep none. Estimated receipts Monday: Cattle 1,000 and calves 7,800. Feeds 200 hogs 5,000, sheep 750.

Recovery Predicted
Pittsburgh (UPI) — Industry officials said the nation's steel production, hit this year by one of its worst slumps since the post World War II period, should recover in 1976 and predicted domestic shipments could reach 60 million tons.

The Season For Puzzlers

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Anytime from Christmas till the first crocuses signal the beginning of spring is a fitting occasion for jigsaw puzzle fanatics.

In many households, puzzles have become as much a part of Christmas tradition as wassail bowls and mistletoe. Santa used to bring at least one 1,000-piece jigsaw every Christmas morning.

A cardtable was wrestled to its feet in the family room and tiny chunks of puzzle were scattered in neat disarray — the sky here, mountains, water, pieces of houses there and there and there.

Faces concentrated, hands moved in quick, deliberate jerks, successes and failures expressed through pursed lips.

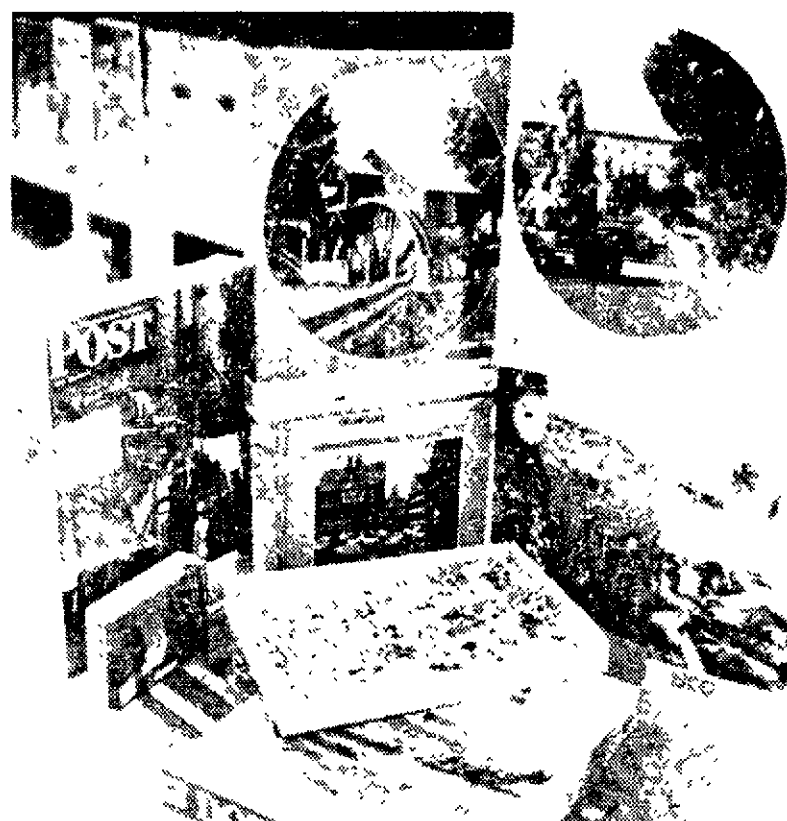

Often these mind teasers took days to finish but there was always something satisfying about solving a jigsaw... until it came to finding the missing pieces. Searches through pockets and under throw rugs were usually in vain. Finally, there was baby brother drooling over an unrecognizable clump of cardboard.

All this was before the days of instant, electronic entertainment, before football games the day after Christmas and the day(s) after that.

Despite the worthy competition, puzzlephiles may have already noticed a few new jags in jigsaws.

Some look yummy, like the "Cherry Pie" and "Box of Chocolates," "Spaghetti and Meat Sauce" and 200 freshly popped pieces labeled "Popcorn."

Others are educational. There's the "Gumball Machine," a memorial to Ernest Brightwell Throckbottom, the alleged inventor. The package explains that "it wasn't until the marketing firm of Fein and Dandy convinced him to abandon his old-fashioned flavors of chicken and cauliflower that Throckbottom gumballs really got rolling."

Some of the most fascinating jigsaws are the pocket-sized "nature scapes," which unscramble into seven-inch round puzzles.

"Blueberries," for example, the package says, "are both inflammable and smudgeproof" and have "never been treated by pesticides" yet they are guaranteed to remain fresh as long as the puzzle fanatic does.

How can this be? To be truthful, the puzzle package says, "there is a lot science doesn't know about blueberry puzzles."

The nature scapes by Springfield also offer this gem on "Tomatoes": Raoul Fogarty, the gourmet, once said, "I'm passionately fond of tomatoes, but by the time I spit out the seeds, there's nothing left!"

Try to top that, Big Ben.

No one, it seems has been forgotten by the jigsaw cutters. Nature lovers can revel in Sierra Club puzzles — "The Narrows of the Escalante, the Canyon Country of Southeast Utah" or

"Aspens near Glen Aulin in the Sierra."

Youngsters can groove on a four-foot-tall Snuffle Upagus from Sesame Street, in only 14 pieces. Teenagers would dig Evel Knievel — although it's not the first time he has been in pieces — and Star Trek.

For the college crowd, there's always the popular Playboy centerfolds that sell for $3 but never mention how many pieces.

Available in the more conventional rectangular boxes are Form 1040 (remember income tax time), a manhole cover, and reproductions by famous artists — "Still Life #24" by Tom Wesslemann from the Nelson Gallery Atkins Museum, "Daybreak" by Maxfield Parrish and dozens of others.

Then there are "Time Pieces," a mind-boggling assortment of watch gears and a collection of "Dollars and Cents" that's as much fun to run your fingers through as it is to put together.

Not to be outdone, the geniuses at Disney have come out with a "Spirit of '76" puzzle, incorporating Mickey Mouse, Goofy and Donald Duck.

Though they're making a comeback, the heyday of jigsaws was during the Great Depression, where as many as 2.5 million were sold weekly on neighborhood newsstands.

They've come a long way since those days when most were pastoral scenes or popular personalities, such as Ed Wynn.

Interestingly, jigsaws were highly recommended not only for the unemployed, but for prisoners, the sick and mental cases.

A popular story of the time told of the Pennsylvanian whose death sentence was commuted to life in prison.

"Now," he said, "I can finish my jigsaw puzzle."

drama, as witness this deal where South got to six spades. He was clearly entitled to investigate the possibility of a slam after North had raised one spade to two. North might have had a hand that would make six spades a laydown.

South had planned to stop at four if North had bid three spades over three hearts, but when North (unjustifiably) heaped to four spades, South carried on to six. Had North held, say, a club more and a heart less, he would have had the proper values for his four spade bid.

West led a diamond, won by East with the ace, and — because the lead could have been a singleton — East returned a diamond. This proved fatal, as East later discovered to his sorrow.

South took the king, drew trumps, and ruffed the queen of diamonds, hoping the queen would fall. When it didn't, South played his remaining trumps, producing this position:

South now cashed three club tricks, and on the third one East couldn't afford to part with the queen of diamonds, so he discarded a heart. Declarer then made the slam by scoring his A-J of hearts.

The outcome would have been different had East played the king of hearts at trick two. This would have severed a crucial line of communication between the North-South hands and the slam would have gone down one.

See A Lawyer, Get Rid Of Freddy

DEAR ABBY: I guess maybe love is blind, but I should have known something was wrong when Freddy didn't show up for dinner half the time and would get home at dawn.

Also he'd go on a lot of "fishing and hunting" trips, but he'd never tell me how I could reach him in case of emergency.

Well, it all became clear when two young girls came to my house yesterday. One of the girls said she was my husband's "fiancee" and started telling me all the heartbreaking details about how Freddy had promised to marry her as soon as our "divorce" was final. She said her home was 150 miles away, but that she'd quit her job, sold everything and moved here waiting for Freddy's divorce to come through so they could be married. She was also six months pregnant.

I asked her to stay until Freddy came home. When he got here and saw her, he nearly died.

He admitted having "known" her, but denied that he promised to marry her. I knew he was lying and told him so. He exploded and then took off and left me with an hysterical, pregnant girl on my hands.

What do you make of this mess? What would you do in my place?

FREDDY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Freddy sounds like a pathological liar to me. He needs to see a lawyer and a doctor. And if he refuses to do so, I'd see a lawyer and tell Freddy to get lost.

DEAR ABBY: After 33 years of what I thought was a happy, solid marriage, my husband asked for a divorce to marry a 22-year-old girl.

Abby, I know that old men think they are lucky to get young girls, but what could a young girl see in a man who is old enough to be her father?

After the settlement, he will have very little money — so it can't be money.

HEART BROKEN

DEAR HEART BROKEN: Don't rule out the possibility that she could "love" him. "Love" means different things to different people. We never really know what is in the hearts and minds of others.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 26-year-old waitress who has been working in restaurants since the age of 13. I am now employed at one of the finest cocktail-dinner spots in town and hope you'll print this. It would help waitresses immensely if the public would follow these simple rules.

1. Please don't holler across the dining room at your waitress, especially, "Hey, girlie!" Also, don't snap your fingers or whistle at us. (We aren't dogs.)

2. If you're not satisfied with your food, please don't snarl at us. Calmly state your complaint, and we will be glad to get you something else and report it to the management.

3. When the waitress hands you a menu, please study it and decide what you want so that when she comes back she can take your order. (About 95% of the customers never look at their menus until the waitress comes back to take their orders. The customers are then annoyed because it takes so long to be served.)

4. If it says, "No substitutes" on the menu, please don't ask if you can substitute.

5. Tell the waitress when you order if you want everything on one check or separate checks.

6. If you're going to fight over the check, please don't tear the check in half!

Thanks, Abby!

DEAR WANTS: That's a switch. A tip from a waitress. I hope it helps.

DEAR ABBY: What does it mean when a guy blows in your ear?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Among other things, it could mean that he's too close.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Have a Merry Christmas! And make it even merrier, do something nice for someone who could use a little cheering up today.

The Season For Puzzlers

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Anytime from Christmas till the first crocuses signal the beginning of spring is a fitting occasion for jigsaw puzzle fanatics.

In many households, puzzles have become as much a part of Christmas tradition as wassail bowls and mistletoe. Santa used to bring at least one 1,000-piece jigsaw every Christmas morning.

A cardtable was wrestled to its feet in the family room and tiny chunks of puzzle were scattered in neat disarray — the sky here, mountains, water, pieces of houses there and there and there.

Faces concentrated; hands moved in quick, deliberate jerks; successes and failures expressed through pursed lips.

Often these mind teasers took days to finish but there was always something satisfying about solving a jigsaw... until it came to finding the missing pieces. Searches through pockets and under throw rugs were usually in vain. Finally, there was baby brother drooling over an unrecognizable clump of cardboard.

All this was before the days of instant, electronic entertainment, before football games the day after Christmas and the day(s) after that.

Despite the worthy competition, puzzlephiles may have already noticed a few new jags in jigsaws.

Some look yummy, like the "Cherry Pie" and "Box of Chocolates," "Spaghetti and Meat Sauce" and 200 freshly popped pieces labeled "Pop-corn."

Others are educational. There's the "Gumball Machine," a memorial to Ernest Brightwell Throckbottom, the alleged inventor. The package explains that "it wasn't until the marketing firm of Fein and Dandy convinced him to abandon his old-fashioned flavors of chicken and cauliflower that Throckbottom gumballs really got rolling."

STAR PHOTO

TRADITIONAL PUZZLES... of landscapes and scenic photos are still around.

Some of the most fascinating jigsaws are the pocket-sized "nature scapes," which unscramble into seven-inch round puzzles.

"Blueberries," for example, the package says, "are both inflammable and smudgeproof" and have "never been treated by pesticides" yet they are guaranteed to remain fresh as long as the puzzle fanatic does.

How can this be? To be truthful, the puzzle package says, "there is a lot science doesn't know about blueberry puzzles."

The nature scapes by Springfield also offer this gem on "Tomatoes": Raoul Fogarty, the gourmet, once said, "I'm passionately fond of tomatoes, but by the time I spit out the seeds, there's nothing left!"

Try to top that, Big Ben.

No one, it seems has been forgotten by the jigsaw cutters. Nature lovers can revel in Sierra Club puzzles — "The Narrows of the Escalante, the Canyon Country of Southeast Utah" or

"Aspens near Glen Aulin in the Sierra."

Youngsters can groove on a four-foot-tall Snuffle Upagus from Sesame Street, in only 14 pieces. Teenagers would dig Evel Knievel — although it's not the first time he has been in pieces — and Star Trek.

For the college crowd, there's always the popular Playboy centerfolds that sell for $3 but never mention how many pieces.

Available in the more conventional rectangular boxes are Form 1040 (remember income tax time), a manhole cover, and reproductions by famous artists — "Still Life #24" by Tom Wesslemann from the Nelson Gallery Atkins Museum, "Daybreak" by Maxfield Parrish and dozens of others.

Then there are "Time Pieces," a mind-boggling assortment of watch gears and a collection of "Dollars and Cents" that's as much fun to run your fingers through as it is to put together.

Not to be outdone, the geniuses at Disney have come out with a "Spirit of '76" puzzle, incorporating Mickey Mouse, Goofy and Donald Duck.

Though they're making a comeback, the heyday of jigsaws was during the Great Depression, where as many as 2.5 million were sold weekly on neighborhood newsstands.

They've come a long way since those days when most were pastoral scenes or popular personalities, such as Ed Wynn.

Interestingly, jigsaws were highly recommended not only for the unemployed, but for prisoners, the sick and mental cases.

A popular story of the time told of the Pennsylvanian whose death sentence was commuted to life in prison.

"Now," he said, "I can finish my jigsaw puzzle."

ASU Bedevils NU In Try For Bowl Record, 17-14

The official signals touchdown and things look good for the Huskers at this point as Monte Anthony (49) finds Fiesta Bowl paydirt. Anthony's touchdown and the accompanying extra point staked Nebraska to a 14-6 advantage.

'Kush & Co.' Earn Praise

By RANDY YORK

Tempe, Ariz. — Talk all you want about Arizona State's speed and defense. The Sun Devils' 17-14 Fiesta Bowl win over Nebraska here Friday belongs inside the shoe of coach Frank Kush's semi-talented, but hard-working son.

Dan Kush, a 5-9, 175-pound junior, kicked field goals of 27, 33 and 29 yards just 24 hours after his father claims "he couldn't hit a bull in the butt with a handful of popcorn."

Amidst the biggest victory celebration since Arizona discovered Mexican food, Dan admitted his incompetence in the Sun Devils' Christmas Day practice.

"I made one of six (field goal tries) from the right side and two of seven from the left side in practice Thursday," he said with a grin. "That made me a little shaky coming into the game, but I had a good warmup and tried to visualize positive results in my mind."

If he was nervous, it was understandable. Although he's already ASU's career record-holder for field goals and extra points, Dan missed the Sun Devils' final two regular season games after aggravating a hamstring injury.

"He's like his dad — ice water in his veins. It must run in the family," said Craig Millbran, ASU's kicking coach. "It took sheer guts and courage to come back from that painful injury. But that's the type of competitor Dan is."

Father Pleased

"Yes, I'm pleased for him," his father said. "He's not a talented guy, but he works at it."

The lockerroom was too emotional for Kush to dwell on his son's kicking. "Everyone else will tell you what a great kid he is, if I don't," he said. "I know his mother will. She's the one who insists he plays."

Players expressed their exultation in varying ways. Here's how some viewed the upset victory.

Linebacker Larry Gordon, the game's outstanding defensive player with 6 unassisted tackles, 6 assists, 1 tackle for a loss and 1 interception: "I didn't like getting ejected from the game (because of a fight with NU center Rik Bonness with 10:35 remaining in the fourth quarter). Their all-American gave me a forearm and I wasn't going to take him giving me that. Even though I left, that fired us up."

Fullback Freddie Williams, who rushed for 111 yards on 18 carries: "The '75 Fiesta Bowl is ours and I'm happy as hell. Our defense played great. Kush kicked three spectacular field goals and our offensive line fired out to get us all those yards. To hell with the yards though. We're No. 1. We beat Nebraska . . . THE Nebraska Cornhuskers."

Second team quarterback Fred Mortensen, who came in in the fourth quarter to throw a 10-yard touchdown pass and two-point conversion: "Both passes were the exact same play. I just fake into the line, read the strong safety and pick the receiver. I wasn't supposed to run on the punt (in the first half). I just thought I could make it and I had it made until I dropped the ball. I got chewed out pretty good for taking the chance on my own."

Split end John Jefferson, the game's outstanding offensive player with eight catches for 113 yards and a touchdown: "We've been put down by a lot of people, but we knew we could win. We were well prepared. Nebraska's a great football team, but the Western Athletic Conference is underrated."

Middle guard Zack DiBrell, who was recruited by Nebraska, but chose the Sun Devils: "Seventeen points, 12-0 and No. 1. Put this down. Nobody can play with the WAC. Nobody."

Dr. Fred Miller, ASU's athletic director, kept the victory in a little better perspective. He said: "We're all floating around on the roof right now, and it's easy to get excited."

'Beautiful Game'

"It was a beautiful football game," he added. "That's a super Nebraska team, but the right team won. We were the best on the field today. There'll be one great party tonight, then we've got to continue to surge forward."

WAC commissioner Stan Bates called the Sun Devil triumph "the biggest thing ever to happen in WAC football, not to mention ASU's program."

Kush initially sidestepped calling the win his biggest as ASU's head coach. "It's certainly the biggest for our kids and for the fans," he said, finally conceding "I guess this would have to stand on top of my 18 years, too."

Lack of recognition is a major factor in his reasoning. "We've been somewhat belittled for our schedule," he said. "Even our own fans have criticized our schedule. This helps put us on the level with everyone else."

"Looking at it realistically," he added, "I can understand why the Rocky Mountain area doesn't get the national recognition. We play our games at night, don't get on television and people don't hear much about us."

Even though he's a member of the board of coaches voting for UPI, Kush said he'll reserve judgment on a possible No. 1 Sun Devil rating.

"I'll wait and see how the other bowl games come out first," he said. "I sure enjoyed this one though. It gives you an opportunity to compare. It not only helps us. The conference needed it, too."

"It's just great in many respects," Kush said. "I'm damn glad Bear Bryant made his decision. You know, I ought to send the Bear a telegram."

Tempe, Ariz. — Arizona State, gambling from the opening whistle and playing loose all the way, upset Nebraska 17-14 here Friday afternoon in the Fiesta Bowl football game.

The loss ended the Cornhuskers' bid for an NCAA record-setting seventh bowl victory and undoubtedly will stir up enough controversy among rabid Nebraska fans to give them something to talk about until next season rolls around.

Field goals of 27, 33 and 29 yards by Danny Kush, son of veteran Sun Devils' coach Frank Kush, and a pair of passes from reserve quarterback Fred Mortensen for a touchdown and two-point conversion settled the issue.

In the final analysis, it was Nebraska's inability to consistently move the football against the stunting Sun Devil defense and the failure to stop Arizona State's draw plays and quick traps run by fullback Fast Freddie Williams.

"Our defense played exceptionally well," Kush, the coach, said. "We did a lot of stunting, but we had to because that was the only way we could beat Nebraska — keep them off balance."

Ferragamo Removed

Second-guessers among Nebraska fans long will question Coach Tom Osborne's decision to replace starting quarterback Vince Ferragamo with senior co-captain Terry Luck after the latter had thrown an intercepted pass on the Huskers' first possession.

"I just felt Vince seemed a little nervous before the game and then he had the interception," Osborne explained outside the subdued NU dressing room.

"Terry had practiced a little bit better than Vince. I thought Terry could do the job and I think he played fairly well."

Luck took over after the Sun Devils converted Ferragamo's interception into Kush's first field goal, but his efforts were plagued by penalties the first two possessions and he was sacked for a loss on the third one.

Anthony Leads Drive

Then, early in the second quarter he launched a 73-yard, eight-play touchdown drive that gave the Huskers a 7-3 lead with 7:50 remaining in the half.

The drive featured a 34-yard run by I-back Monte Anthony, who later scored on a one-yard plunge, and was aided by a 15-yard personal foul against ASU.

The Huskers next took over at the ASU 41, the only time in the game they launched a drive in Sun Devil territory, but a fumble stopped them at the ASU 33 seven plays later.

Luck engineered a 91-yard, 16-play scoring drive that consumed 7:11 of the third quarter and put the Huskers in a 14-6 lead, but his last four efforts in the game met with failure.

Nebraska stopped an ASU drive next when safetyman Jimmy Burrow intercepted at the NU 2 and ran it out to the 21, but the Huskers were caught on a clip and had to start from their own three.

Another penalty after the Huskers had been forced to punt, set up the Sun Devils for their only touchdown of the game, starting from the Husker 36.

The scoring plays were from Mortensen, first to wide receiver John Jefferson for a 10-yard touchdown and then to wingback Larry Mucker for the tying two-point conversion.

The Huskers avoided a disaster momentarily following Randy Lessman's 11-yard punt on the next possession when Dave Butterfield intercepted a pass at the Husker one. But, again, Luck didn't get a first down.

Arizona State took over at the NU 49 and moved to the 12 in seven plays. Then young Kush came in and booted the winning field goal.

Nebraska's Last Gasp

Nebraska still had a chance to win or tie the game, but the fourth turnover of the game ended all hopes.

It came after Luck had marched the Huskers to the Things eventually turned sour for the Big Red as Dan Kush (14) booted the winning field goal for Arizona State in the fourth quarter. The ASU holder is Bruce Hardy (15) and the blocker is Freddie Williams (36).

Kansas City, Mo. — Nebraska and Kansas, each with a 5-3 record against nonconference opposition, collide at 9:05 p.m. Saturday here at Kemper Arena in the final first-round game of the Big Eight's annual preseason Basketball tournament.

In Friday's opening game, Kansas State tallied 12 straight points early in the second half en route to an 81-67 victory over winless Iowa State.

In the second game Friday, Missouri tripped Oklahoma

State, 81-79 to advance to the semifinals opposite Kansas State. That game will be at 7:05 p.m. Monday at Kemper Arena. Nebraska and Kansas, meanwhile, meet in a game that could very well decide the tournament's title. In a semifinal event here last year, Kansas scored a 63-62 victory on a basket with less than 15 seconds left.

Four Straight

The Huskers have won four straight games, including three consecutive road contests over the University of Pacific and New Mexico State in the Roadrunner Invitational and an upset verdict over Vanderbilt at Nashville, Tenn.

The Nebraska-Kansas winner will face the winner of Saturday's first game, matching Colorado and Oklahoma.

The Buffalos and Sooners, although not considered threats for the league title, have been laced in spoiler's roles this season.

Winston finished with 16 points while Chuckie Williams, hitting from the outside, led the Wildcats with 24.

Art Johnson led Iowa State with 21 points with Hercle Ivy, the conference scoring leader, picking up 20.

Kansas State, upset by Iowa State in the preseason tournament the past two years, appeared on the verge of making the game a rout in the first half, outscoring the Cyclones 22-2 during and eight-minute span and taking a 32-12 lead.

But then Iowa State coach Ken Trickey inserted senior Mike Benjamin and the 6-6 forward sparked the Cyclones to within one, 36-35, with 1:33 to play in the half. Evans then hit a shot from the top of the key as the halftime buzzer sounded to give Kansas State a 38-35 lead.

After Benjamin, who finished with 14 points and 11 rebounds, opened the second half with a jump shot to pull Iowa State within one, Kansas State ran off 12 straight points and took a 50-37 lead which it never relinquished.

Tigers Prevail

Missouri, meanwhile, combined the late shooting of Jim Kennedy, Willie Smith and substitute Scott Sims for a victory over a surprisingly stubborn Oklahoma State.

The Cowboys fell behind by 13 points four times in the second half before striking back until they were within one point twice, but could get no closer.

Dave Kragel's shot with six minutes, 19 seconds left sliced Missouri's lead to 68-67. Smith, Kim Anderson and Kennedy dumped in consecutive baskets for the Tigers, and the Cowboys never got that close again, although they did trim the gap to two points on two occasions.

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Until two days ago, Pittsburgh coach Johnny Majors wasn't sure whether he'd start Robert Haygood or Matt Cavanaugh at quarterback in the Sun Bowl football game against Kansas.

"It was kind of like flipping a coin," Majors said of the two young men who are roommates. Haygood had started Pitt's first seven games and was injured. Cavanaugh then took over. Now he had both of them healthy.

"Really, Haygood hadn't lost his starting job," Majors said.

"I talked to both of them before the game and I asked if one of them got a hot hand, if the other would mind if I let him go all they way. They said for me to do what I thought was right."

He went with Haygood, a junior.

And Haygood responded with an inspired performance that triggered a 33-19 rout and won him honors as the game's outstanding player.

He scrambled for more than 100 yards on the ground, completed 8 of 11 passes, including one for a touchdown and deftly directed a wishbone attack that left the favored Kansas defenders if not bewitched then certainly bothered and bewildered.

"I'd practiced good," Haygood said.

"I'd consistently worked hard all year. I had confidence in myself. You have to believe in yourself—and your teammates.

In all, the youthful Pitt team, which loses only four of 22 starters to graduation, ran up 372 yards rushing against an uncertain, often inept Jayhawk defense that had scored a regularly-season 23-3 victory over mighty Oklahoma.

Tony Dorsett and Elliott Walker each scored two Pitt touchdowns.

Osborne Cites ASU Finesse

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Tempe, Ariz. — Arizona State fans and sports writers have a king-sized inferiority complex which surfaced again after the Sun Devils had scored their 17-14 upset victory over Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl football game in Sun Devil Stadium.

And even Coach Tom Osborne of the Cornhuskers became tired of being asked to make comparisons of the Sun Devils and such teams as Oklahoma and others in the Big Eight Conference.

"Could Arizona State play in the Big Eight week in and week out?" was the question that brought a mild explosion from the Husker coach.

"I don't know why people down here keep putting them (ASU) down and keep asking those questions," Osborne said. "They're a fine team. They can play with anybody. They deserve to be among the top three or four teams in the nation."

That was the same thing he had been trying to tell writers and broadcasters all during Nebraska's pre-game preparation period here, but nobody seemed to want to believe him.

'Great Football Team'

"They have a great football team," he added. "We thought so before the game. They have a great defense and their offense played better than I thought they would and they certainly deserve the victory."

Before he tired of answering that type of question, Osborne said ASU's linebackers and defensive ends and secondary are better than those at Oklahoma, but that the Sooners had better down defensive linemen.

"Arizona State is about as good as Oklahoma in the skill positions," he said.

Coaching rival Frank Kush was elated with the outcome and called the victory "a great win for Arizona State and the Western Athletic Conference."

He said the Sun Devils have had big wins, such as the Arizona game this year, which clinched the WAC championship.

"I've had more meaningful games as far as I'm concerned," he added. "But from the players and fans standpoint this was probably the most important game since I've been here because it will do more for national recognition next season than any we've played."

Kush said the touchdown and two-point conversion that tied the game early in the fourth quarter were the same plays. "We just trust to two different receivers," he explained. "The quarterback reads the strong safety and then picks his receiver."

Osborne said the Sun Devils did very little different than the Huskers had expected.

More Passes

"They threw the football more than most anybody we've played," he said. "We didn't move the ball as well as we have, particularly early in the game. They did some things a little bit differently than they had, but you expect that in every game."

Offensively, the Huskers were hampered by very poor field positions. "That made it hard to open up and do very much," he said. "Defensively, we gave them some key third down conversions and they made some big plays that I had hoped we wouldn't give them."

The Huskers' pass rush wasn't very good as evidenced by the 173 yards ASU gained through the air. Sun Devil quarterbacks were sacked just once.

"We didn't get to the quarterback much and that was a little discouraging," Osborne said. "It was a combination of not rushing well and their getting great pass protection."

On the Luck-Ferragamo situation at quarterback, Osborne said he had Ferragamo ready to go back in the game in the fourth quarter, but when Dave Butterfield intercepted a pass to give the Huskers the ball at their own one with 9:38 left, he said he decided he didn't want to put in a fresh player in that situation.

A year ago, trailing 10-0 against Florida and the ball on their one, Luck took over for Dave Humm and directed a 99-yard scoring drive that ignited a rally that produced a 13-10 Husker victory.

The situation was different this time, though. Humm had thrown four interceptions and the Huskers were going nowhere.

Against ASU, Luck had not been intercepted and his ball handling had been flawless and the Huskers weren't losing the game.

Although Osborne is certain to be criticized, it's like athletic director Bob Devaney said after the game: "You're on top of the world when you win, you're in the gutter when you lose. There's no in-between."

Rodgers Gains All-Star Spot

Toronto (AP) — Former Nebraska standout Johnny Rodgers was named to the Canadian Football League's all-star team.

The 24-year-old former Heisman Trophy winner was one of the eight Montreal Alouettes named to the team. Rodgers previously made the all-star team as a wide receiver in 1973 and 1974.

He made it this year as a running back with backfield mates Willie Burden of Calgary and Art Green of Ottawa.

Nebraska's coaching staff had a tough afternoon trying to figure a way to subdue the motivated Sun Devils. While defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin (left) gave instructions to the Black Shirts, head coach Tom Osborne's worried expression indicated his concern with the offensive difficulties.

Tony Davis (25) drives for yardage as ASU defenders Larry Gordon (53) and Randy Moore (79) attempt to halt the NU fullback. Although the Huskers failed in their bid for a bowl victory record, Davis claimed an individual mark by becoming Nebraska's all-time leading rusher.

ASU Extends Winning Streak

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State, by winning the Fiesta Bowl over Nebraska Friday, extended the nation's longest major college football winning streak to 13 games.

The Sun Devils' 17-14 triumph gave them 12 victories this season. They defeated Hawaii to end the 1974 season.

Arkansas State, a major college team for the first time in 1975, has won 14 in a row, but three of those victories came in 1974, when Arkansas State was listed as a Division II team.

State Recalls '75 Quest For 'The Good Life'

Omaha (AP) — During 1975, paradox and pathos tagged along with Nebraskans in their bittersweet quest for The Good Life. There was humor and good will along the way.

One traveler was Mike Romano, 14, Brooklyn, N.Y., who strummed the nation's heart strings after his grandmother packed him off on a bus for Boys Town.

"I don't want him in this awful crime city," she said.

Donations to ease the youngster's plight poured in from a sympathetic nation. And by year's end, a more affluent Mike Romano would be soliciting funds in a New York news conference to bail his mother and father out of jail.

Residents of the tiny northeast Nebraska town of Niobrara faced an uphill struggle to enjoy a warm and dry Christmas.

The entire town of 275 was forced to move atop a nearby hill because the Gavins Point Dam, built 20 years ago on the Missouri River, put water tables on the rise and flooded them out from the ground up.

Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky dramatized the economic woes of 1975 by returning an expensive shipment of furniture ticketed for the City Council, saying "there's no posterior important enough for a $450 chair."

The mayor later amended the statement to include, "Well, maybe just one," after a newsman pointed out that Zorinsky's own City Hall chair cost more than $450.

A plush but inexpensive place to sit also was on Fred Alexander's mind when he went to an auction of the old Union Hotel in Superior. Alexander had his eye on an antique velvet couch, but was disappointed when someone topped his $2 bid.

So Alexander, 21, bought the entire hotel for $3,000. The couch came with it.

Mary Clark, 39, a mother of nine, also had a dream: A college degree. In 1972, the busy Omaha housewife enrolled in the College of St. Mary, beset with doubts over her ability to compete with students a generation younger.

Now 42 and a junior, Mrs. Clark enjoys a B-plus grade average and is the student body president.

For Maurice Saucedo, 41, a retired Air Force master sergeant, a similar dream was 20 years in the making. But its fulfillment came after he died of a heart attack, just eight credits away from graduation.

Bellevue College awarded Saucedo's degree to his widow. "The only thing is, I feel so bad because he couldn't appreciate it. He wanted it so bad," Mrs. Saucedo said.

There also was good news in a report from Lincoln, where a federally funded program was credited with cutting drunk driving in half in the city of 140,000. The three-year campaign was based on extensive arrests and treatment of drinking drivers.

But the rigorous enforcement stirred citizen protests that "a reign of police terror exists in Lincoln."

A formal court record in Omaha had this seasonal note: "Santa Claus executed a wage assignment and was remanded to the custody of his elves, whereupon the court was rewarded with a jovial, 'Ho! Ho! Ho!'"

It reflected the release of a man arrested on a child support complaint, who said if he went to jail it would cost him his job as a department store Santa.

Lincoln Youth Seriously Hurt In 2-Car Crash

Mark W. Fry, 17, of 1208 Garfield was in surgery at Bryan Memorial Hospital early Saturday morning after an accident at 53rd and O streets late Friday night.

Police said Fry suffered head injuries in the two-car crash while he was a passenger in a car driven by Zane T. Janousek, 16, 929 Furnas. Janousek was attempting to turn south from O St. when he collided with a car traveling east on 53rd being driven by Nera E. Bellows, 30, 6100 Vine St.

Fry had to be pried from the wreckage by Lincoln firemen.

Controversy Focus Of Beef Stories

Omaha (AP) — For years Nebraska has been recognized as one of the larger cattle-feeding states, but during 1975 the nation's eyes were focused on the Husker state because of a series of controversies involving beef.

First was the surprising Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing by American Beef Packers (ABP) of Omaha on Jan. 7, which eventually led to indictments against ABP founder and President Frank R. West.

In the spring, U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney made national headlines when he halted planned implementation of new beef grading guidelines.

State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood settled meat price-fixing suits against two of the nation's largest grocery chains.

Not to be outdone by ABP, Iowa Beef Processors (IBP) of Dakota City plunged itself into controversy late in the year by naming as its chief operating officer the son-in-law of a New York man who was involved in an alleged scheme by which IBP conspired to bribe union officials in an attempt to get its boxed beef into the New York City metro market.

Hog prices reached new all-time highs on the Omaha livestock market, and cattle prices rose to near-record highs during the late summer months.

American Beef was one of the biggest state stories of the year.

West and his top aide, Robert E. Lee, were indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to defraud midwestern livestock producers, other creditors and ABP stockholders of more than $20 million. The charges were contained in a 105-count indictment, which also named ABP and its wholly owned subsidiary, Beefland International Inc., in 104 counts of mail and wire fraud.

Ultimately, Judge Denney dismissed all the charges against Lee and Beefland and most of the charges against West and ABP. However, West still faces 25 counts of mail and wire fraud, the company faces 36 similar counts, and Denney is expected to render his verdict sometime after the first of the year.

West and Lee also face conspiracy and fraud charges in Iowa, and had check charges have been filed against West in South Dakota. Additionally, West has been charged with conspiring to bribe a federal meat grader.

ABP's limited bankruptcy action reached an anticlimax on Dec. 23 when, after 11 months of negotiations and court hearings, Bankruptcy Judge David Crawford confirmed ABP's plan to repay its creditors. The plan establishes a new line of credit from ABP's largest creditor and main-line source of financing — new money that will allow ABP to reopen operations — but the firm will be only a shadow of its former self.

Once the nation's second-largest cattle slaughterer behind IBP, ABP now will operate only three plants: Oakland and Harlan, Iowa, and Omaha. The company's big Dumas, Tex., plant was sold, as were the plants in Ft. Morgan, Colo., and Council Bluffs, Iowa. The Nebraska City plant is up for sale.

Skrum in Line
West has resigned as ABP president and is expected to be succeeded by former Iowan Joseph Skrum, now of Sterling, Colo. West, still a member of the ABP board of directors, remains with the firm in a salaried advisory capacity.

When the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) tried to implement its new beef-grading guidelines, the Independent Meat Packers Assn. of Omaha challenged them Judge Denney issued a temporary injunction, which later was upheld on a temporary basis during a late-night hearing in the Omaha living room of Eighth U.S. Circuit Court Judge Donald Lay.

A three-judge Eighth Circuit panel held another hearing two days later, modifying Denney's order to a 45-day time limit and ordering the judge to hold full hearings on the matter. Denney did so, taking two weeks for a full trial in May. After the trial, he made his earlier order permanent, saying the USDA had overstepped its authority in promulgating the new standards and had not filed a sufficient economic impact statement.

The government appealed the ruling to the Eighth Circuit Court, which reversed Denney. The original plaintiffs, along with a number of intervening groups, are carrying their appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

As of now, the new standards are still waiting in the wings.

Safeway, A&P Sued
Schmit, with the aid of State Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, filed price-fixing suits against Safeway Stores and the A&P chain, alleging the two conspired to keep live-cattle prices artificially low and retail prices artificially high.

Both cases were settled out of court, and the settlements were approved by a federal judge in Lincoln. The two grocery chains denied any wrongdoing but signed an agreement to avoid certain specific practices in the future.

Part of the money obtained in the settlement was used to set up an organization to monitor beef marketing practices and to help in the promotion of beef products.

In November, trading in Iowa Beef stock was halted on the New York Stock Exchange. Officials said trade was suspended because of an avalanche of sell orders that built up immediately after Walter Bodenstein was named to head IBP's processing division.

Bodenstein, who had worked for a New Jersey firm that marketed IBP products, is the son-in-law of Moe Steinman, now serving a jail term for tax evasion.

Currier Holman, IBP board chairman, and Iowa Beef itself were indicted in New York on charges of conspiring to bribe union and supermarket officials in a multimillion-dollar scheme to get IBP boxed beef into the New York City market.

Convictions Appealed
IBP and Holman were convicted in 1974, and the convictions are now under appeal. Steinman pleaded guilty.

One week after he was named to the processing post, Bodenstein resigned, and IBP officials took out large newspaper ads to explain their stand on the Bodenstein issue.

Despite the controversy, IBP posted an impressive earnings and sales record for the year.

Country Store Still Surviving

Howells (AP) — People still come from miles around to visit the general store of Edward and Anna Vesely in this northeast Nebraska community.

When the store was founded in 1908 by Vesely's father, Frank, and Anton Kunhardt, eggs were selling at 12¢ a dozen and butter at 16¢ a pound.

Vesely, who has worked at the store since 1927, has suffered two heart attacks. But he still bustles about making home deliveries to residents unable to visit the store.

Most of the other work is done by his wife, Anna, and his sister, Mayme Hiltz.

Vesely said two families walk three miles into town to do their shopping. Then, he said, "We take them back home."

The tiny store is jammed with goods including clothing, shoes, material, cosmetics and the specialty — tiny handmade pastry brushes made from duck feathers. Area residents use the brushes in making Bohemian pastries.

The biggest change over the years, Vesely said, was removal of the long counter along one side of the store and the switch to self service.

In the early days of the store, products were sold in bulk. Now most of them are packaged.

There also have been changes in the customers. Mrs. Vesely said, "I remember when you could bring in a dozen eggs and buy groceries in return to last a week. Now even the little kids have 65¢ to spend."

"Nobody walks out without candy," Vesely said. "A lot of them call it the candy store."

$40 Million Income Tax Hike Big News In State Government

By The Associated Press
A $40 million tax increase was the big news in state government for 1975.

The tax increase came shortly after Gov. J. J. Exon called the Legislature into its first special session in several years.

Exon offered a legislative program which he said would allow a tax increase to be avoided. But the legislative majority decided Exon's proposal would leave the state government too close to red ink.

A last-minute attempt by Republicans in the nonpartisan unicameral to let the Democratic governor live with his own program failed. Exon blamed the tax increase on the Legislature.

The hike brought income taxes for 1976 to the record levels of the Tiemann administration.

The state's technical community colleges got a new funding plan and an increased measure of local control. However, the local control was threatened when Southeast Technical Community College planned to close its Fairbury campus.

Proposals for property tax relief got no where again in 1975. Officials were unwilling to place the burden on other taxes.

Water was a key issue in 1975. Under a bill passed by the Legislature, landowners can no longer pump until they can pump no more. The use of water can now be regulated by the government in shortage areas.

Penal reform moved a few steps forward and little bit back. Over an Exon veto the Legislature decided to build a new medium-minimum security prison in Lincoln and another in Omaha to replace the state's aging reformatory.

But plans for a chemical dependency unit and a diagnostic and evaluation center were delayed. Government found that many people just didn't want prisoners in their neighborhood.

The State Supreme Court had a busy year, suspending G. Bradford Cook, former chairman of the federal Securities and Exchange Commission, from the practice of law.

The court also upheld a "gag" order in a case that promised to make national headlines.

The gag applied in the Sutherland murder case is now before the U.S. Supreme Court.

The state agreed to an out of court settlement in the case involving the Beatrice State Home. The settlement meant the state would have to place most of those in the home in community-based rehabilitation programs where possible.

Meanwhile, community mental retardation programs were already complaining of fund shortages.

The state began inspections in August 1972 and now operates a joint state-federal program under the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System.

Canada Gives Service Award

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — The Canadian 1975 public service achievement award will go to Jake Warren, ambassador to the United States, the prime minister's office said.

With the award is a $5,000 honorarium. Warren was chosen by a special committee whose members are appointed by the prime minister from outside the government service.

State Recalls '75 Quest For 'The Good Life'

Omaha (AP) — During 1975, paradox and pathos tagged along with Nebraskans in their bittersweet quest for The Good Life. There was humor and good will along the way.

One traveler was Mike Romano, 14, Brooklyn, N.Y., who strummed the nation's heart strings after his grandmother packed him off on a bus for Boys Town.

"I don't want him in this awful crime city," she said.

Donations to ease the youngster's plight poured in from a sympathetic nation. And by year's end, a more affluent Mike Romano would be soliciting funds in a New York news conference to bail his mother and father out of jail.

Residents of the tiny northeast Nebraska town of Niobrara faced an uphill struggle to enjoy a warm and dry Christmas.

The entire town of 275 was forced to move atop a nearby hill because the Gavins Point Dam, built 20 years ago on the Missouri River, put water tables on the rise and flooded them out from the ground up.

Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky dramatized the economic woes of 1975 by returning an expensive shipment of furniture ticketed for the City Council, saying "there's no posterior important enough for a $450 chair."

The mayor later amended the statement to include, "Well, maybe just one," after a newsman pointed out that Zorinsky's own City Hall chair cost more than $450.

A plush but inexpensive place to sit also was on Fred Alexander's mind when he went to an auction of the old Union Hotel in Superior. Alexander had his eye on an antique velvet couch, but was disappointed when someone topped his $2 bid.

So Alexander, 21, bought the entire hotel for $3,000. The couch came with it.

Mary Clark, 39, a mother of nine, also had a dream: A college degree. In 1972, the busy Omaha housewife enrolled in the College of St. Mary, beset with doubts over her ability to compete with students a generation younger.

Now 42 and a junior, Mrs. Clark enjoys a B-plus grade average and is the student body president.

For Maurice Saucedo, 41, a retired Air Force master sergeant, a similar dream was 20 years in the making. But its fulfillment came after he died of a heart attack, just eight credits away from graduation.

Bellevue College awarded Saucedo's degree to his widow. "The only thing is, I feel so bad because he couldn't appreciate it. He wanted it so bad," Mrs. Saucedo said.

There also was good news in a report from Lincoln, where a federally funded program was credited with cutting drunk driving in half in the city of 140,000. The three-year campaign was based on extensive arrests and treatment of drinking drivers.

But the rigorous enforcement stirred citizen protests that "a reign of police terror exists in Lincoln."

A formal court record in Omaha had this seasonal note: "Santa Claus executed a wage assignment and was remanded to the custody of his elves, whereupon the court was rewarded with a jovial, 'Ho! Ho! Ho!'"

It reflected the release of a man arrested on a child support complaint, who said if he went to jail it would cost him his job as a department store Santa.

Nebraska Leader In Control Of Feedlots

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska leads the Midwest and possibly the nation in controlling feedlot pollution, according to a State Department of Environmental Control spokesman.

Lanny Icenogle, chief of the department's agricultural pollution control section, said Friday that pollution from feedlots is declining, fewer lots than anticipated must install controls, and cost controls have not been as high as expected.

So far, 12 percent of lots inspected have been required to install some type of controls, ranging from a dike or diversion to a full retention system, Icenogle said. Another 2,000 to 3,000 lots must still be inspected.

Since all large lots and known pollutants have been inspected, the percentage probably will go down as remaining lots are studied, Icenogle said.

There are an estimated 18,000 lots in the state, according to Paul Johnston, executive secretary of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association. Many lots don't require inspection because they don't have pollution potential, he said.

The state began inspections in August, 1972 and now operates a joint state-federal program under the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System.

Canada Gives Service Award

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — The Canadian 1975 public service achievement award will go to Jake Warren, ambassador to the United States, the prime minister's office said.

With the award is a $5,000 honorarium. Warren was chosen by a special committee whose members are appointed by the prime minister from outside the government service.

Jehovah's Witnesses Said Beaten, Tortured In Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The Jehovah's Witnesses religious sect says its members are being driven from country to country in southern Africa by beatings, rape, torture and political pressure.

Awake, the sect's newspaper, recently published details of what it said was a wave of terror against thousands of Witnesses in Malawi and said they were also being persecuted in Mozambique and Zambia. Sect officials said many Witnesses have died from the violence in Malawi.

In all three countries, the paper said, the actions resulted from the refusal of the Witnesses to give allegiance to the ruling parties. The sect believes organized government is sinful.

The Jehovah's Witnesses are also unpopular with the white rulers of Rhodesia and South Africa — both involved in low-key guerrilla wars with black nationalists — because they refuse to serve in the army.

Awake, in its Dec. 8 issue, said the latest violence against the Witnesses had been carried out by the Malawi Congress party's Youth League. It said these incidents, gathered by the sect's Watchtower Societies, were typical.

In the Malawi villages of Bundu, Nyanga and Phatha, a mob of more than 100 armed men drove Witnesses from their homes, stripped and beat them, and then tried to make the men and women have sexual relations.

In Kanchenche, a village northwest of Lilongwe, members of the Youth League stripped and beat women Witnesses and burned their public hair with torches. Five married women were raped, and one 17-year-old girl was raped by three men. The local party chairman led the assaults.

At the village of Chimasongwe, in the same area, men and women were bound together to try to force them to have sexual relations. A brother and sister were tied together.

Western reporters are barred from both Malawi and Mozambique and so cannot con-

Most of the Witnesses involved in the alleged persecution were identified as blacks native to Malawi.

Frank Muller, the Jehovah's Witnesses presiding overseer in South Africa, said President Kamuzu Banda of Malawi has said he will decide finally what to do about the Witnesses there before the end of January.

Muller said he is not optimistic about the outcome. He urged Witnesses all over the world to write to Banda and members of his government asking them to stop the attacks.

Awake said the violent attacks on the Witnesses began in Malawi in 1964. It said Banda's supporters burned the homes of 1,081 members of the sect and more than 100 of their meeting places.

The newspaper described what followed this way:

Banda banned the sect as "an unlawful

society," which touched off a countrywide attack on Witnesses. Homes were ransacked and burned. Meeting halls were wrecked. Thousands were beaten and thrown into prison. Many Witnesses fled to neighboring Zambia and to Mozambique, then under Portuguese rule.

The 1972 convention of the Malawi Congress party adopted a resolution declaring that the Jehovah's Witnesses "hindered the political and economic development of Malawi." It demanded that all members of the sect be fired from jobs in government, commerce and industry and said all who lived in villages "should be chased away."

This set off a new wave of torture, rapes and beatings.

"Forms of torture that could come only from sick minds, such as driving six-inch nails through men's feet and forcing them to walk, were used to try and force these people to violate their religious convictions and conscience and buy a party card," Awake said.

Thousands of homes were destroyed, and 36,000 adults and children fled to Mozambique, where Portuguese colonial authorities gave them land on which to establish refugee camps, the newspaper continued.

When Mozambique became independent on June 25, the pro-Marxist Front for the Liberation of Mozambique — Frelimo — took over and demanded that the refugees declare their allegiance to the new regime. The Witnesses refused and thousands were driven back to Malawi.

Muller said about 18,000 moved into southwest Malawi and another 6,000 were being held in camps on the border along with 20 busloads of Mozambican Witnesses expelled from Lourenco Marques.

Sect officials said violence resumed in Malawi this summer after Congress party branch leaders again tried to force the Witnesses to buy membership cards. They said more than 4,000 fled to Zambia but that they had been forced back to Malawi by October.

Mao Is 82

Tokyo (AP) — Mao Tse-tung, still China's most dominant figure, was 82 Friday.

The birthday was not mentioned in the Chinese media, which published articles charging America and the Soviet Union with preparing for a world war and naming the Soviets as the most serious enemy to developing nations.

Mao has not appeared in public in the last several years but recent visitors have reported him in good health although with occasional slurred speech and halting movements. He has received 16 distinguished visitors from foreign countries this year, down from the 20 he reportedly received in 1974.

Jehovah's Witnesses Said Beaten, Tortured in Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The Jehovah's Witnesses religious sect says its members are being driven from country to country in southern Africa by beatings, rape, torture and political pressure.

Awake, the sect's newspaper, recently published details of what it said was a wave of terror against thousands of Witnesses in Malawi and said they were also being persecuted in Mozambique and Zambia. Sect officials said many Witnesses have died from the violence in Malawi.

In all three countries, the paper said, the actions resulted from the refusal of the Witnesses to give allegiance to the ruling parties. The sect believes organized government is sinful.

The Jehovah's Witnesses are also unpopular with the white rulers of Rhodesia and South Africa — both involved in low-key guerrilla wars with black nationalists — because they refuse to serve in the army.

Awake, in its Dec. 8 issue, said the latest violence against the Witnesses had been carried out by the Malawi Congress party's Youth League. It said these incidents, gathered by the sect's Watchtower Societies, were typical.

In the Malawi villages of Bundu, Nyanga and Phatha, a mob of more than 100 armed men drove Witnesses from their homes, stripped and beat them, and then tried to make the men and women have sexual relations.

In Kanchenche, a village northwest of Lilongwe, members of the Youth League stripped and beat women Witnesses and burned their pubic hair with torches. Five married women were raped, and one 17-year-old girl was raped by three men. The local party chairman led the assaults.

At the village of Chimasongwe, in the same area, men and women were bound together to try to force them to have sexual relations. A brother and sister were tied together.

Western reporters are barred from both Malawi and Mozambique and so cannot confirm independently the sect's statements, but the reports reaching South Africa are numerous enough to give them some credence.

Most of the Witnesses involved in the alleged persecution were identified as blacks native to Malawi.

Frank Muller, the Jehovah's Witnesses presiding overseer in South Africa, said President Kamuzu Banda of Malawi has said he will decide finally what to do about the Witnesses there before the end of January. Muller said he is not optimistic about the outcome. He urged Witnesses all over the world to write to Banda and members of his government asking them to stop the attacks.

Awake said the violent attacks on the Witnesses began in Malawi in 1964. It said Banda's supporters burned the homes of 1,081 members of the sect and more than 100 of their meeting places.

The newspaper described what followed this way:

Banda banned the sect as "an unlawful society," which touched off a countrywide attack on Witnesses. Homes were ransacked and burned. Meeting halls were wrecked. Thousands were beaten and thrown into prison. Many Witnesses fled to neighboring Zambia and to Mozambique, then under Portuguese rule.

The 1972 convention of the Malawi Congress party adopted a resolution declaring that the Jehovah's Witnesses "hindered the political and economic development of Malawi." It demanded that all members of the sect be fired from jobs in government, commerce and industry and said all who lived in villages "should be chased away."

This set off a new wave of torture, rapes and beatings.

"Forms of torture that could come only from sick minds, such as driving six-inch nails through men's feet and forcing them to walk, were used to try and force these people to violate their religious convictions and conscience and buy a party card," Awake said.

Thousands of homes were destroyed, and 36,000 adults and children fled to Mozambique, where Portuguese colonial authorities gave them land on which to establish refugee camps, the newspaper continued.

When Mozambique became independent on June 25, the pro-Marxist Front for the Liberation of Mozambique — Frelimo — took over and demanded that the refugees declare their allegiance to the new regime. The Witnesses refused and thousands were driven back to Malawi.

Muller said about 18,000 moved into southwest Malawi and another 6,000 were being held in camps on the border along with 20 busloads of Mozambican Witnesses expelled from Lourenço Marques.

Sect officials said violence resumed in Malawi this summer after Congress party branch leaders again tried to force the Witnesses to buy membership cards. They said more than 4,000 fled to Zambia but that they had been forced back to Malawi by October.

Tokyo (AP) — Mao Tse-tung, still China's most dominant figure, was 82 Friday.

The birthday was not mentioned in the Chinese media, which published articles charging America and the Soviet Union with preparing for a world war and naming the Soviets as the most serious enemy to developing nations.

Mao has not appeared in public in the last several years but recent visitors have reported him in good health although with occasional slurred speech and halting movements. He has received 16 distinguished visitors from foreign countries this year, down from the 20 he reportedly received in 1974.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by SIDNEY OMARR

Saturday, December 27, 1975

Many born under Aries go through period of domestic adjustment that could include change of residence in 1976. A more realistic outlook is required, along with material gain as result of creative efforts. Aries, Libra persons could play significant roles in the life of Aries during this upcoming year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Steer clear of speculative schemes. Stick with quality, factual information. Young person who is impatient, may chide you. Remember obligations and adhere to basic course. Cancer, Capricorn could be in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be patient, not lethargic. Finish project, don't quit. Persons in "high positions" observe and are willing to give you valid chance to demonstrate abilities. Aries, Libra figure in picture. Be aware of time print - refuse to give up something for nothing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get to heart of matters. You are able to act in more direct, independent manner. Leo, Aquarius could be involved. Accent on basic issues, on special services and unique communication with relative in transit.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Some of your natural talents, qualities are appreciated by those who look you for granted. Emphasis on personality, appearance, "magnetism." Change, travel, variety are featured. Aquarius surprises - sense of humor is essential.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): Highlight versatility. Look beyond the immediate. Be aware of potential. Check calls, correspondence. Publishing opportunity could be in picture. Social activity is favored - Gemini, Sagittarius could be involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be thorough - highlight specifics. Do your homework. Restless associates, relatives may want to "jump the gun." Take care that you are not swept up into rash situation. You have right, perhaps even a duty, to be positive, responsible and certain of your policies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial aspects are analyzed. You may be called on to report, explain, defend, writing and eager to learn. Gemini, Virgo persons could figure prominently. Accent is on valuables, possessions, collections and payments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You're stronger than might be apparent on surface. Surprise element is present but is likely to work in your favor. Responsible individual, associated with property, wants to make concessions which do not compromise principles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Perfect techniques. Avoid self-deception. Define terms. Study Scorpio message. What appeared a secret is going to be revealed - in surprising fashion. Behind story is spotlighted - more so than what is up front.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Relationships are intensified. Nothing is apt to occur halfway - now it is all or nothing. Know it and don't play games. Chips are down, stakes are high - if you don't mean it, get away. Wish may be fulfilled in a very unorthodox manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get chance to spread influence. You find there is room for you at more elevated position. Much depends on your willingness to handle more responsibility. One who makes "cutting remarks" is merely letting. Know it and remain calm.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get "second chance." You can rectify past mistakes. You can write, advise, distribute, publish. Pace may be slow, but you are making progress. Leo is likely to be in picture. Element of timing favors your efforts.

IF DEC. 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you will rebound from setback that occurred only recently in financial, personal and professional areas. You come back strong - and September of 1976 will be your outstanding month. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You are personable, capable of being dramatic - and you constantly side with the underdog.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
